THE FRESHET

Has done an immense amount of damage along the whole line of the Mis souri river, and in the country north of Platte. At Columbus the ice gave way on the morning of the 5th, and down came the flood submerging the whole lower part of the town in less than an hour. The water was three feet deep in part of the town, rushing along with terrible force and bearing along on its surface hage cakes of ice, some measuring five feet in thicknes. The people were instantly driven out of their houses, leaving furniture, provisions, and everything to the mercy of the flood. The water of seven years ago.

The Omaha Republican of the 23d says the warehouse on the lower levee has disappeared entirely. It has gone down stream with the rush of waters. This warehouse belonged to John Mo Cormick & Co. The depot building of the Chicago and Northwestern Rail road, on the Iowa bank of the river has succumbed to the flood, and now lies a shapeless mass of ruins in the water.
