A FAIR SPECIMEN.

The following is from an account of the proceedings of the Democracy in New York, Wednesday night, Sth inst. ; "Henry Clay Dean entered the parfor of the Ohio delegation, at the Fifth Avenue, to night, and mounting the table made a speech so coarse and obscene as to drive ladies from the adjacent parlors, denouncing Chase and demanding his defeat at all hazard. He denounced Chase, in words too coarse for repetition in print, as a G-d d-d old worn-out strumpet of the Republican Abelition party, who was now after the Republicans and no further use for him He declared that if Chase received the nomination there would be a Democratic ticket nominated against him. He denounced Belmont as a foreign Jew agent of G-d d-d foreign Jew bondhelders, who he'd a organization, for which he was not fit, scenity and abuse, of which the above of the hotel could stand it no longer-A delegate was according sent to him to tell him that Ohio wanted the use of her committee room, and Dean there.
