'In 1833, I visited Presidents Madison, In 1833, I visited Presidents Madison, Jackson and Adams, who signed the above. The document is on parchment, and has been presented to each succeeding President, and chearfully signed, with the exception of President Harrison, he died before it was selving. He, however, before he died, abandong an interest in a distillery, to indicate the declaration if it had been presented to him. The early signatures were obtained before total abstinence was fully established as the only platform on which the reform could rest with hope, as it was found, beyond cavil, that alcohol was the same fatal poison when used as a drinklin fermented ardent spirit as in distilled.

The Presidential Daclaration was handed to our present Chief Magistrate a day or two after his inauguration, which he promptly signed. making thirteen signers."
