THE APPROACHES TO PLATIS-MOUTH. Two or three weeks since we published a communication touching the subject of opening avenues to the south-west and north-west, from a point on Main street near Fifth. Since that time we have talked with several well informed gentlemen of the city, and nearly all agree that the future of the city demands that some action be taken immediately in regard to this matter. As our streets are now laid out, to get from the business portion of the city to the country, or vice versa, one must make an indefinite number of right angles, unless he is disposed to make several perpendiculars, neither of which are pleasant to contemplate, much less to execute. By laying out avenues, or streets, through the two principal ravines entering the city from the northwest and south-west, we can secure good approaches to the city, without expending thousands of dollars in grading streets, and then other thousands in improved property; but the time is not high time our city authorities took some cost a vast amount of money to pay for ture. He took him into the stable, where he found two other horses loose in their stalls, one of Dr. Whitney's and another of Mr. Beach ... He tied them all, and turning around met a man face to face, in the stable. He appeared much taken a-back, but inquired the way to Fremont, and went out. ing then went over to his brother's, about a half a mile off, where he found Mr. Andrews' horse loose in the cornfield, with a bridle on. Convinced that there was mischief afoot, he returned home and related what he had seen Dr. Whitney and Capt. Eldred immed ately started in pursuit of the rogue, rhauled him about five miles from edar Bluffs, took him bank to Stocking's, where the fellow made a full confession, claiming, however, stole one horse-that of Mr. Andrews
