VOL. 6. PLATTSMOUTH, NEBRASKA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 19, 1871 NO. 42.

EDITORIAL, CORRESPONDENCE.

LINCOLN, January 12, 1871.

There is little doing in either branch of the Legislature, as everybody—members, lobyists from all over the State, and citizens of the capital city, all seems to be engrossed in the great political contest being waged here to see who shall go to the United States Senate. Thayer, Saunders Hitchcock, Taffe and Rogers, seem to be the principal candidates, although there are at least a baker's dozen self-sacrificing individuals who stand ready to go to the national capital provided it is absolutely necessary to save the country. There is a large lobby here, and it is astonishing and amusing to witness the operations of some of them. Men whom you suppose to be the most upright and honorable men in the whole State will stoop to some of the lowest tricks of the hot-house politician. Democrats are here from all over the State for the purpose of pushing the Democratic members into the contest, and for the purpose of sharing the spoils with some successful hermaphrodite—Andy Johnson Republican—politician, provided they can get such an one to be a union of a Republican minority with the Democracy. And what is a source of the greatest wonder to all upright Republicans is the fact that men are found who, claiming to be deep dyed in the principles of the Republican party, are blinded by the false pretenses of Democrats and the hermaphrodite Republicans that they are being used as the tools for holding into power a set of time-servers, who are as changable as are the winds of our Nebraska prairies—men who would flaw at the feet of power and barter away every principle for which an hundred thousand brave men laid down their lives during the recent struggle for national existence. What the result of the contest will be no man can tell; but it is hoped, for the cause of human freedom and human right, that the scales will yet fall from the eyes of the men who mean right but are misled, and that the watchword "pure none but REPUBLICANS on Guard" will be heard and heeded, and that Republicans will decide among themselves who shall represent loyal Nebraska—which has heretofore occupied the proud position of the youngest and the most loyal among the sisterhood of States—in the senate of the United States.

LINCOLN, January 13.

The Senate met at the usual hour this morning. The Committee on Elections had a report signed by Messrs Haskell and Thomas recommending the ousting of Pottenger and the admission of Mr. Kennedy. The report the Journal was read and approved. Mr. Tucker, of Johnson county, arose and moved that the Senate ADJOURN until two o'clock Monday.—Mr. Haskell of Douglas, arose and said he hoped the Senate would not adjourn just yet, as he had a report all ready in the contest between Mr Pottenger and Mr. Kennedy, and that justice demanded that action be taken without further delay. The motion was pressed without giving time to even present the report, which Mr. Brown, of Doe, (Chairman of the Committee) had refused to sign. A division was called for which resulted as follows: For adjournment, Messrs. Tucker, Gerrard Pottenger, Sheldon, Brown, Hawke and Tenant. Against adjournment, Messrs. Haskell, Metz, Cropsey and Thomas; absent, Hilton; not voting, Mr. President—Cunningham. The proceeding is looked upon by all right minded men as the most high-handed outrage ever perpetrated in the name of liberty, and is universally condemned by all unprejudiced minds, as it was a move without a shadow of excuse except that Pottenger's vote is wanted to defeat Gen. Thayer.

Mr. Tucker boasted in the Senate Chamber that they had commenced the fight to win, and they proposed to do it at all hazards. Mr. Pollard, the County Clerk of your county, from whom Mr. Pottenger's certificate came, has been actively lobbying to keep Mr. Pottenger, in, although he admitted to members of Senate yesterday that Kennedy was elected by nearly two hundred majority.

Absent Minded People.

Absent minded people are funny. Sir Isaac Newton wanted his servant to carry out a stove that was getting too hot. A fellow stole his dinner before-hand, and he afterwards thought he had eaten it because he saw the dishes empty. A Scotch professor walked into the middle of a horse pond while pondering on "final cause," Ben. Franklin pushed down the fire in his pipe with the finger of a young lady, and severly burned the lily white poker. A gentleman in Troy received a letter in the dark, used the letter to light his lamp, and then looked about for it to read. Pere Gratry, one day in Paris, thinking he had left his watch at home, took it out of his pocket to see if he had time to go back after it. Neander, the church historian, used to go to his lectures in his night cap and night gown, and sometimes walked in the gutter. But all those cases do not equal that of a man who will put down a left bower when he might know that the opposite party holds the right and nee

A good story is told of Anna Dickinson, which illustrates that a woman, however eminent, is a woman still. When she opened the Boston Lyceum she came promptly to the front of the platform at half past seven, and quietly surveyed the audience without opening her mouth for several minuits. She did not sit down, although a chair had been provided her. "Why didn't you sit down?" asked one of the managers. What answer gave the eloquent little woman? "Do you suppose I was going to sit down in my new dress?"

Do all the good you can, and don't make a fuss about it.—Dickens.

NEBRASKA RAILROADS.

We clip the following article in reference to railroads in Nebraska, from the Railway Review of January 5th.

Omaha & Southwestern.

This company was organized November 25th, 1869, to build southwest to Manhattan, on K. P. R. R., where it is also expected to connect with the M. K. & P. R., through a proposed branch of the latter to that place. The total distance is 180 miles.—20 of which to the Platte River, at Cedar Island, are now running. It passes on a water grade through Douglas, and Sarpy counties. It there connects with the B. & Mo. Riv. R. in Nebraska to Lincoln, 67 miles from Omaha. The equipment is new—2 eng. and 1 pass., 30 flat and 1 box cars. The completed portion passing through very counties, whose aggregate population is 24,000, is paying 8 per cent. on cost above ex. The officers are S. S. Caldwell, President; A. Saunders, Vice President; J. B. Moulton, Chief Engineer, and General Superintendent; Charles Williams, Master Mechanic; Richard Gray, General Freight and Ticket Agent.

Burlington & Missouri River Railroad in Nebraska.

The company propose the following branches:

Ashland.—up Walnut Creek to junction with U. P. R.

Big Blue Valley.—from Crete south and north to connections with C. P. R. at Columbus.

Lincoln and Weeping Water.

Fremont, Elkhorn and Missouri Valley.—The first 10 miles was to be finished December 31, with view to ultimate extension to connection with S. C. & P.

Elkhorn Valley.—Sixty days, fifty miles have been graded, and the track is approaching completion. Mr. Elsie is building it under State grant of 10 sec. acres. The valley, very beautiful and fertile, is settled 100 miles up. The R. will be built to junction with U. P.

Keeping Water and Platte.—Projected from Nebraska City northwest through Saunders and Butler counties.

An Anecdote of Banker.

A brisk little gentleman walked into Robert Bonner's presence not long since, says an exchange, with a long story for his consideration. He thought to use the influence of his own social position, as well as argument, upon Mr. Bonner to insure its acceptance. After an exceedingly flowery introduction he said:

"And, Mr. Bonner, this lady is the daughter of an ejaculated clergyman."

"Humph! Can she write?" inquired the wide-awake editor.

"I suppose she can," replied the visitor.

"Well, if she can, and what she writes suits me, then I shall be happy to accept her work and pay her for it; but the lady being the daughter of a clergyman hasn't the slightest weight with me. It is merit that tells here, my dear sir. If the daughter of the devil writes me a good thing I am just as ready to pay her as I am the daughter of a domine. Good morning sir."

Rich Without Money.

Many a man is rich without money. Thousands of men with nothing in their pocket, and thousands without even a pocket are rich. A man born with a good sound constitution, a good stomach, a good heart and good limbs and a pretty good head-piece, is rich. Good times are better than gold; much more than silver, as I guess it which fire and carry energy to every function are better than horses and land. It is better than a landed estate to have the right kind of father and mother. Good breeds and bad breeds exist among men as really as among herds and horses. Education may do much to check evil tendencies or to develope good ones, but it is a great thing to inherit the right proportion of faculties to start with. The man is rich who has a good disposition—who is naturally kind, patient, cheerful, hopeful, and who has a flavor of wit and fun in his composition. The hardest thing to get along with in this life is a man's own self. A cross, selfish fellow, a despondling and complaining fellow—a timid and care-burdened man—these are all born deformed on the soldier. Therefore may not limp, but their thoughts do.

Influence of Cannon Firing Upon Rain.

M. Charles Le Maout, apothecary at Saint Enfleve, in France, has published some interesting observations on the influence of artillery firing upon the fall of rain and the force of the wind During the siege of Sebastopol, soon after the clouds in a fine rain began to fall, which was sometimes followed by a deluge or whirlwind. Immediately, and as a consequence of the condensation, the mercury in the barometer rose in proportion to the violence of the cannonading. A chart of the movements of the barometer afforded a good indication of the bombardment. The author then proceeds to show how rain could be produced by a judicious discharge of artillery. There is no doubt that this would be a better use of cannon than the wholesale slaughtering of men, but whether rain could be produced at will in this way is another question.

There is some confirmation of the theory in the fact that a violent rain fall has attended the recent engagement of troops near Metz, in France. The subject is one quite worthy of investigation, and if it were found to be expedient, the proposition of the author to establish meteorological stations with suitable artillery ought to be carried into execution.—Journal of Applied Chemistry.

John B. Gough tells the following story, though it be at his own expense. Once while on a lecturing tour through England, he was introduced to a village audience in these terms:

"Ladies and gentlemen: I 'ave the honor to hintroduce to you the distinguished lecturer, Mr. John B. Gough, who will laddress us on the subject of temperance. You know that temperance is thought to be a dry subject, but to-night, as we listen to our friend, the lecturer from hover the hocean, we may hope to 'ave the miracle of Sampson repeated, and to be refreshed with water from the jawbone of a hass!"

The Indians and our government are once more at loggerheads. The Indians make the usual complaints that the agents of the government do not do as they agreed. A complaint chronic and true.

The novel spectacle of a woman presenting her grown-up son as a witness in a suit for divorce from his father, was lately witnessed in the Superior Court, at Chicago. The woman declared that she had endured life with a savage for a quarter of a century, but now that her children are grown up, and able to protect her she could endure it no longer, and was resolved to have the knot untied.

Tycoonelia.

A plausible story is going the rounds of the papers concerning the existence and capture of an animal called the Ly cuncia in Hudson's bay territory. It is described as being very similar in shape to the giraffe or camelopard of Africa; that is, with twenty feet of neck and no body to speak of. Its color is said to be a glossy brown, interspersed with ilium, rabbi black spots, which render it more beautiful than the tiger or leopard of the Indian jungle, etc., etc., etc. It is probably the steed originally ridden in his peregrinations by the "Hairy Man of Kansas," so successfully "interviewed" by Mark Twain. Imagination, probable, supplied the rope by which it was captured, with a hungry supper for the lion of its cage, and the animal itself in all probability, is nightmare; not a Ly-cuncia.

THE CONTESTED SEATS.

If Willet Pottenger is retained in the Senate, (in a seat to which he was not elected, and which a high minded man would blush to claim or hold in view of the well known facts of the case,) merely to cast a vote for United States Senator in accordance with the wishes of those who retain him, he is a fool if he does not stipulate, as a part of the bargain, that he shall be retained for the session. If he has a right in the Senate at all, any longer than it would take to elect a worthless cur who slipped through a door left open, he should be invested with the full dignity of the office and retained to the end. In manifesting a willingness to be used for an unworthy purpose, he betrays a baseness of character that can find its only parallel in the utter betrayal of right that sanctions his retention.

Mr. Kennedy would be justified in refusing to accept the seat, if withheld from him until after the Senatorial election.

With the exception of Mr. Quimby, of the House, and Mr. Tennant, in the Senate, we are not as fully acquainted. The ground of contest is said to involve several points. If we are correctly informed, the latter should have given place to Mr. Neleigh before this time. —Omaha Republican.

Indian Frauds.

Commissioner Parker has addressed a letter to Secretary Delano, in which he defends himself from the aspersions cast upon the department with which he is connected, and vindicates his own action. He shows that Mr. Welsh has been seeking to get the management and furnishing of supplies under the control of the Peace Commission. Secretary Cox and himself decided last year against the views and claims Mr. Welsh. They were sustained by the President. Since that time Mr. Welsh has been acting as a volunteer agent, and has been very freely criticising the action of the department and its subordinates. Mr. Parker invites the fullest investigation, and claims that he has acted in good faith and with regard to the best interests of the Indians and the Government. He makes out a fair vindication of himself, whatever may be said about others.—Omaha Republican.

Behave.

We so hate sham reverence as a people, that we easily swing to the other extreme. In some congregations the confusion is intolerable. Knots stand at the door, gather round the stove and whisper, talk, laugh until the minister begins the services, and then they rattle to their seats like a flock of sheep! The late ones thunder or rustle or squeak down the aisles during the prayer, not a few gaze about the house when they ought to be engaged in prayer; the ushers sometimes make a tableau. One needful lesson us all to learn is to behave in church. Ill manners strike into the heart if they do not come out of it. If one has no reverence for God, he ought to have decency enough not to annoy those who have. Ministers especially should not offend when they chance to be hearers.—They don't always behave well at general meetings. Good manners as useful as good preaching.

Who'll Do.

Some one in Western New York writes to Horace Greeley for the position of interpreter or secretary of the San Domingo Commission, under the impression that Mr. G. had been or would be selected for the position. Thus happily the philosopher responds:

My Dear Sir.—All I ever saw or heard of General Grant assures me that he has too much sense to think of sending me to San Domingo. Thus far, he has honored and gratified me by never suggesting to me that I could be more useful to the country, or to his Administration, in any other position than in that I have filled to my own entire satisfaction for almost thirty years. At all events, I assure you that I never thought of going to San Domingo—am not (I trust) wanted to go to San Domingo—and, at all events, won't go to San Domingo.

Yours, HORACE GREELEY.

I shall never forget the feelings I had once when climbing one of earth's great pyramids in Egypt. When half way up my strength failing, I feared I should never be able to ascend to the summit or get back again; and I well remember the help given, even by Arab hands, to draw me on further; and the step I could not quite make myself, became too great for my wearied frame—the little help given me, sometimes more and sometimes less, enabled me to go up, step by step, step by step, until at last I reached the summit, and breathed the pure air, and had a grand look-out from that lofty eminence. And so in life's journey, we are climbing, we are ascending.

We are feeble, every one of us now and then needs a little help, and let us from that eminence reach down for the brother's or sister's hand, and help another to stand beside us; and thus, joined hand in hand, we shall go on conquering, step by step, until the glorious eminence shall be gained.

BISHOP SIMPSON.

Politeness.

Men of power should use and carry that power gently; one who does not lose his vantage ground, who really possesses it, by trying a gentle method of accomplishing results. He who has a hundred cannon at his back can afford to be polite to an opponent, and request the favor of a compliance with his wishes. A General who is capable of backing up his request need not insult a foe when he demands his surrender. An editor who has the best of a controversy can afford to be modest; he who has a clincher for an argument can afford to suggest it, instead of rudely cramming it down his opponent's throat.

The passion of litigation is a marvel, if not a mystery. There are men who would contest the right of the sun to rise earlier in the summer than in the winter, if they could find a court to issue an injunction against the proceeding.

How to Treat your Clergyman.

"Do not be afraid of doing too much for him. The best you can do is poor pay. If he had a conscientious appreciation of his duties, no man can carry with him higher views of life or more pressing anxieties and responsibilities. He second only to the mother, must greet the little one. Just commencing to travel this roadway of life, and set the little feet so that they shall be enabled to travel aright and escape the dangers which lurk on either hand, all along the journey. He must unite the young men and maidens, for good or evil, and send them out into the world to labor and to love together, or to struggle and to hate apart. When the household heaven clouds over and the rains fall into the home, he must stand by the reeble to encourage and console. And when, one morning, the doors are closed and the shutters are fastened; when a cloth which has rendered the table gray in the year out, is moved back to the wall; when the old cloth in the corner tells no longer for one with whom time is soon end: when he who was the strength and reliance of the home must lies sleeping in the upper chamber, white as the flowers about him, and silent as the noiseless darkness, as I shall cross the well-worn three-fold only once more, and forever, then he must step in and say those words of sympathy and consolation which only he can say. All else is in his hands from the cradle to the grave, even though the rocking of that cradle may reach into second childhood, and the life beyond there, which goes on in always increasing but never ending circles. Therefore, I think it will be to the benefit of the church if you lift up his hands and the lifting up of his hands will prove a benediction to you."

Early Days of Wyoming Territory.

In the barroom of a way-side tavern, where the stage stopped to change horses, and where teamsters tarried to drink, a few rough customers sat one afternoon beside the stove. Enter a mountain ruffian, venemously drunk, who took out his revolver and commenced practicing with it at various objects behind the bar and on the walls. While this was going on, the cries of an approaching ox teamster to his cattle were heard, and soon the driver appeared. Stalking up to the bar he called for a glass of liquor, but as he raised it to his dirty lips, the rumbler was shattered by a well aimed shot from the practiced man's revolver. Without a word, the bull whacker put his hand behind his back, produced his pistol, leveled it at the ruffian's head, and remarked as the body dropped to the floor: "That I—d scoundrel would have hurt somebody pretty soon." He then filled another glass and drank the contents, strode out as deliberately as he had come in, and with a "whoa, haw there," started his oxen up the road.

A lazy boy makes a lazy man, just as a crooked sapling makes a crooked tree.—Those who make our great and useful men were trained in their boyhood to be industrious.

It is with nations as with individuals, those who know the least of others think the biggest of themselves; for the whole family of Pride and Ignorance are incestuous, and mutually beget each other.—Colton.

There are eyes which need only to look up, to touch every chord of a breast choked by the stifling atmosphere of stiff and stagnant society, and call forth tones which might become the accompanying music of a life.—Jean Paul.

To persons of ordinary modesty and common sense, just praise is at once a cordial, checking them with the flush of warmth, and a tonic, bracing them for future good work. To non-reverent, diffident natures it is almost a vital necessity.

A Georgia editor has had his pistol stolen. He advertises to give its contents to the thief if he will return it.

Jefferson gave as a reason for not making speeches, that he had "no faculty for thinking on his legs." But that was before it became fashionable to make speeches without any thought in them.

A brother lawyer once told John G. Saxe that a "lord was unprofessional "Right," said Saxe "a lawyer cannot be too Lord-ly."

Bishop Pinckney, assistant bishop of Maryland, is sixty years of age and his wife eighty, she having made the clothes in which he was christened as a baby.

"Is a pleading thing to reflect upon," says Dickens, "and furnish a complete answer to those who contend for the gradual degeneration of the human species that every baby born into the world is a finer one than the last.

WIDOWS MITE.—A Milwaukee widow, on being cautioned by her minister about flirting, said she knew it was wrong for unmarried ladies to flirt, but the Bible was her authority; it said "widow's mite." She was flirting awfully at last accounts, her pastor acknowledging that "widow's mite."

Boys remember you grow older every day, and if you have bad habits, they grow older too, and the older both get, the harder they are to separate.

A woman's right to hold her tongue when it has only some silly thing to utter is put thus by our favorite novelist Geo. Eliott. "Half the sorrows of women would be averted if they could repress the speech they know to be useless; nay, the speech they have resolved not to utter."

President Grant is not apt to indulge in humor, but the part of the closing sentence of his last message wherein he declares "for a pure and untrammelled ballot, that every man entitled to vote may do so just once, at each election, without fear of molestation or proscription on account of his political faith, nativity or color," made the whole House of Representatives, when it was read, turn involuntarily to the seats occupied in that body by the representatives of Tammany Hall.—Philadelphia Press.

The other day the front door of the New York Tribune office had to be closed for some purpose. Horace wrote on a piece of paper, 'Enter on Spruce street,' and sent it down to the man who does the printing of the bulletins to be copied. The man, studied over Horace's tracks all the forenoon, and finally, in despair, wrote "Editors on a spree!" and posted it up. The passers by thought the circumstance was not unusual, but wondered why it should be posted up so conspicuously.

A big, moonstruck youth, came feeling around a house in Lexington the other night with cracked guitar and creaky voice, singing "put me in my little bed." A window was finally opened, and the gentleman informed that if he didn't "shut," they would "stand him on his little head."

It is supposed that the latter proposition will satisfy the Amour Propre of France, and reconcile the people to restoration.

The Right Hon. Wm.
