

"SOME MEMBERS."

It is said that "some members of the Investigation Committee" were in Omaha a few days since taking testimony. How is this, that "some members" were in Omaha taking evidence, when the committee was in session at Lincoln? Is not this rather "doubling teams" on the Governor? Could he be before both branches of this committee, to present his defense, at the same time? This would look as if an advantage was being taken of the parties accused, and an effort was being made to prevent them making a proper defense. We hope we are mistaken about this matter, and that the people's representatives are not taking any such undue advantages of the men whose official acts they are called upon to investigate. It would certainly be a long stride back into the dark ages—a re-establishment of the old time inquisitions of Spain—to assail the character of a man, either private or special, without giving him a fair opportunity to confront his accusers and the witnesses brought to testify against him. We are satisfied there is a mistake about this matter, and that the committee is composed of men who are too honorable and high minded, and who think too much of justice and a Republican form of government to permit any such proceedings.

IMPEACHMENT.

The Blair Register has the following sensible article in regard to the impeachment business:

We notice that several gentlemen of the legal profession are discussing the impeachment question through the Omaha papers, and among them we recognize Judge Clinton Briggs, General E. Estabrook and John Delaney, with whom we are personally acquainted, and who are accounted good authority in their profession. These gentlemen disagree on one point—the liability of Gov. Butler to impeachment, during his present term of office, for acts committed during his previous term. Judge Briggs holds that the Senate has not the right to try him for misdemeanors committed previous to his present term, while Gen. Estabrook and Mr. Delaney claim—and rightly so we think—that Gov. Butler of 1871, is liable to the official acts of Gov. Butler of 1869 and 1870. We have too high an opinion of the Governor to believe for a moment, that he will seek to avail himself of this "Baby Act," in order to deprive our legislators of a fair and full investigation of all his official acts. In his Inaugural Address he courts an investigation of his administration; and it is due to his honor, and to his reputation as a public man, that he be favored, and thus shielded from the base dishonor which would attach to his name, if his mis-guided friends should succeed in warding off, by a legal quibble, a full investigation into the transactions at the Capital.

We desire to see such men as cry "stop that!" and then flee to the mountains when called upon to substantiate, under oath, their base insinuations, promptly and effectually silenced. The way to do this is to call them to the witness stand. Let all such be summoned. A few more precipitate flights like that of the Omaha Chief will clear the Governor before the people. But let us make a clean job of it now. The Governor understands as well as we that dodging, evading, quibbling, or "covering up" now, will be considered by the press and people as equivalent to conviction; and so understanding it, he is not so unwise as to seek any avenue of escape save an honorable acquittal. We believe he will meet the investigation boldly, and when cleared, he can appeal to an open record, made by the representatives of the people, and shall believe that he will stand, until proven guilty, either by competent witnesses on a fair trial, or by availing himself of the legal quibble which his impolitic friends are presenting for his consideration. If upon examination of "Persons and Papers," by the committee, enough evidence shall be adduced to warrant a trial, we shall be "first and foremost" to advocate a rigorous and unrelaxing prosecution.

A new well.

An Irishman took a contract to dig a public well. When he had dug about twenty five feet down, he came one day and found it caved in—filled nearly to the top. Pat looked cautiously around and saw nobody near; he then took off his hat and coat, hung them on the windlass, crawled into some bushes, and awaited events. In a short time the citizens discovered that the well had caved in, and Pat's hat and coat on the windlass, they supposed he was at the bottom of the excavation. Only a few hours of brisk digging cleared the loose dirt from the well, and just as the eager citizens had reached the bottom, and were wondering where the body was, Pat came out thanked them for relieving him of a "silly job."

SLANDER.

Yes, you pass it along, whether you believe it or not, and that one-sided whisper against the character of a virtuous female, or an honorable man, you don't believe it, but you will use your influence to bear up the fools report and pass it on the current. Strange creatures are men and women. How many reputations have been lost by surmise. How many hearts have been bled by whispers. How many benevolent deeds have been chilled by the shrug of a shoulder. How many individuals have been shunned by a gentle, mysterious hint. How many a bosom have been won with grief by a single nod. How many graves have been dug by false reports. Yet you will pass the slander along, you will keep it above water by a wag of your tongue, when you might sink it forever. Destroy the passion for tale telling. Let not a word that will injure the character of another, and as far as you are concerned the slander will die.—Scrap Book.

The Home, (Ga.) Commercial made its appearance the other morning with a hole in it. The editor explained it in the next issue, by stating that he had discovered an objectionable article, after the edition had been worked off, and had clipped it out of all the papers before sending them out.

"Are you connected with a paper here?" asked a countryman of an inmate of the Indiana Insane asylum. "Oh, no," was the reply: "I have been to the news and am cured; a man never runs a news paper after he is cured."

A BILL.

Soon after the elections last Fall, we published an article recommending the abandonment of the present system of nominating party candidates, and recommending that they be chosen by direct ballot. We are glad to note that several of our state exchanges are now agitating the question, and that so far we have not heard a dissenting voice among the press of the state. The Nemaha Journal says: "The caucus concentrates political power in the hands of the few, while the true republican or democratic principle is to distribute the power equally among all. The shrewd managers, the 'knowing ones,' will in politics as well as in other pursuits, exercise a large amount of influence in controlling affairs, and while it is impossible, under any system, to give all an equal and exact amount of power or influence in politics, it is desirable and essential to the safety and permanence of our institutions that we approximate as nearly to that end as circumstances will admit. "The ballot is the best medium yet discovered through which to exercise this power, and the surest guard against concentration. Its agency in politics is to secure an untrammelled expression of public sentiment. Let our nominations hereafter be by ballot. Abolish the caucus and institute in its stead a primary election, held under such restrictions and regulations as will insure a fair expression of the party sentiment. This has been done in other States and localities, and has given satisfaction. "We are aware that primary elections held under the auspices of party organization are liable to abuses, just as is any other plan that could be adopted, but this is infinitely in advance of the caucus. It will lessen the opportunities for fraud, and strengthen, purify and unite the party. We call the attention of our county and state Republican Central Committees to the matter."

Entrance into Life. It is doing a service to mankind to destroy the prejudice which is generally entertained that youth is educated when some care has been taken of their infancy. This prejudice, besides other bad effects of it, suspends the zeal of that small number of individuals in the middle ranks of life who wish to give their children the best education they possibly can. From a false notion that the minds of young persons are formed at a very early period, they suffer them to be their own masters at a time when they stand most in need of a guide to direct them in the course of the most important part of their education, by the wisdom of their counsels, the gentleness of his instructions, and the force of his example. Few persons in their infancy, learn the art of employing and governing and employing themselves; and it is very difficult to learn it till the faculties of the mind are full blown, and the character has taken its true bias. When young persons, therefore, are entering upon the tempestuous ocean of human life, then is the time when they must be taught the pilot's art, the manner of steering their course so as to avoid rocks and quicksands. A philosopher might begin to take the charge of education at a time when the vulgar think it is finished. Many persons are capable of educating children in the ordinary method; there are few, very few, who are capable of forming men.

An exchange has the following sensible paragraph: "The man who wrote life is real, life is earnest had a level head on his shoulders. If you want to win you must work. Don't wait for any one to help you. 'Get up and get it.' Keep the traces straight and pull right along. Rest when you get to the top. Don't try to steal the passage on the coupling pole of somebody else's wagon. Just as sure as you get up there so a self-hungry will haul out whip behind, and you will have to dust. Go it alone; watch the corners and you can take every trick. These are the winning cards—honesty, energy, christianity and liberal advertising."

The Delaware river is to be stocked anew with salmon. The eggs to be used are from the tributaries of the St. Lawrence, and arrive at Troutville on Wednesday of last week. They are half an inch in diameter. 60,000 young trout have been hatched this season. Besides these are a number of the land locked salmon, obtained at a great expense from the St. Croix river, Maine.

Some sinner has stolen the thermometer from the Bond du Lac Reporter office. That paper informs the thief that it will be of no use to him where he is going, as it does not mark higher than 33.

Doctor's Wife—"Why do you not send for my husband, dear, if you feel unwell?" Disgustingly-forward Child—"O, pa says it's generally easier to get rid of the disease than of the doctor, if you once get him in the house."

A widow once said to her daughter, "When you are at my age, it will be true enough to dream of a husband."

"Yes, mamma," replied the thoughtless girl, "for a second time." The mother faints.

"Is that the time the old cow died?" asked an Englishman, met at the industry with which a New Englander whistled Yankee Doodle.

"No, beef," replied Jonathan, "that are the tunc the old Bull died of."

The Press of the State generally seem to accept the sudden flight of Morton and Miller to Utah as a confession that, whether Gov. Butler is guilty of any wrong act or not, they are not prepared to substantiate the wholesale charges they have been making, and which Miller has boasted he could prove in fifteen minutes. Whether they know that which would convict the Governor or not, their flight at this particular juncture convicts them of base slander, and unless they return and give their evidence before the investigating committee, they will sustain that reputation hereafter before the people of the State.—Chronicle.

The New York Sun says: "The time was when a Logan swore wickedly and played desperately. In fact, he was about the cutest hand with a pack of cards as we ever saw, but that is all over now. He has experienced religion and joined the church and we have no doubt that in the absence of Gen. Schenck and Frank Blair his piety is as sincere as that of any man in either House of Congress."

The New York Democrat discredits the theory that the employment of female telegraph operators will tend to lessen the amount of profanity that finds its way over the wires and ventures the opinion that when women can ventilate their feelings by wiggling their fingers, they'll swear as much as men.

Shoo fly cravats, a trifle smaller than a breakfast shawl, are now worn quite extensively. They cover the entire shirt bosom.

"Time Works Wonders" as the lady said, when she got married after thirteen years courtship. Grace Greenup assures the world that a government clerkship at the capital is not a gold mine or a diamond field. By close economy a man may lay up enough to pay his undertaker's bill.
