ALL ABOUT THAT ROOSTER

Its History.

Painful Attempt to Eat Crow. It Nearly Kills Him.

He is Sent to a Grant Office and Bocovers, &c., &c., &c.

It will be remembered by all the readers of the HERALD, that after the election, we lost our rooster, and in a decent, and proper manner, begged of our cotemporary to lend us the use of his cock, that we might do a little crowing. Not until Saturday did our neighbor comply, and then he sent the sickest lookest bird down to our office that ever man saw .-You see they had been trying to get the poor thing to crow for Greeley, all day, but it was no go. They hed stuffed this true American game-cock with crow for a month or so, and after Tuesday it soured on his stomach. He was the sickest looking cock we ever saw. The crow was dribbling from his mouth, his feathers drooped, and it was a piciful sight. Well, you know how he looked, we need not tell you if you saw the Watchman Saturday.

All day Friday, all Saturday morning, the boys at the "Perhaps" tried their level best to get a crow out of him. Finally, in despair, they sent him down to our office, looking just like this: that is to say, flat on his back, and looking as if he had a dose of ----

No sooner did he enter the door of the HERALD office, however, than he began to revive. Stiles slipped out and brought him some good Grant whis the drum, and the devil gave an imitation crow that set the old fellow on his legs, and before we got ready to go to press he was once more a triumphant cock, a crowing cock, and came out in good, lively, martial atti came out in good, lively atting the first of good of a box of bombs, with an anonymous fetter stating that a thousand bombs had been scht to Paris.
