THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

We speak a language containing vast treasure of religious wisdom, and vernacular, more or less, over a large portion of the globe, and, for this and other causes, perhaps destined to become an organ of international communication more universal than any other tongue.

Among the wants of the community, but that a "supply" had been at length obtained, and the new minister was expected to enter on his duties on the morrow.

"And a refreshin' season he'll hav of it," said Pap.

"Why so?" I asked.

"Oh, Bill! Grinkey an' fother chaps goin' to break him in tomorrow; an' if you want to see him, I'd advise you to go thar."

"And I did go—not to see him," as Pap Kilderkin suggested, but, I trust, from better motives. Pap went too, by what prompted, I prefer not judging.

When we reached the church the minister had not yet made his appearance, though a goodly number of hearers had already assembled.

"That's Bill Grinkey," whispered Pap, "an' them's fother chaps."

"Make way for the mourners!" sang out Bill, crowding with his companions, into a front seat, where a boisterous conversation was struck up, mingled with an incessant cracking of peanuts.

"I kin tell you the program," Pap continued; "a pack of shoonin' ministers 'll be tched off doorn' the first hymn, an' a pair o' game chickens as a couple o' them chaps got in their pockets, 'll be sot fightin' as soon as the text's gin out, after which gent'l Ned 'll be in order."

A sudden silence fell upon the congregation. Not a murmur was heard, and the peanuts ceased to crack. Looking up, I saw the minister in the pulpit; and guess my surprise at recognizing him as the young man that had struck out so deftly from his shoulder the day before.

With a clear, manly voice, he gave out a hymn, which was sung through without interruption. A prayer was offered up amid profound and decorous silence. Another hymn followed, and then a sermon, earnest, plain, practical, without a word of cant in it.

From the beginning to the end of the exercises, not an unseasonable sound was heard, save a single infrequent crow, promptly choked off, from one of the invisible chickens.

"I say, Bill," I overheard said from one of "fother chaps," "at their way out, 'that parson's a trump; he preaches a downright good lick, an' fights fair without bitin' or gouglin'."

It was easy to see that the new minister's status was settled. I have since heard that Bill Grinkey has become an excommunicated member of the church, and the parson the happy husband of the young lady, an' whose champion he first achieved popularity.

LETTERS FROM BOYS AND GIRLS.

The Greeley Homestead. From Moore's Rural New Yorker.

Mr. Editor:—I want to tell you something about the old Greeley Homestead, but I am afraid I shall not describe it very well, for I am not fourteen years old, and I have only been in school six months in my life.

My grandfather, Zacheus Greeley, settled here in 1825. He came from Vermont. He was one month in getting here. He came all the way from Buffalo by the Northern and Western Canal.

What a long, lovely, dreamy journey to make in the autumn!

When grandfather got within ten miles of this place, he had to hire a sled with oxen, for there the road ended. One of the sled he put all his household goods, and his family, and thus he made his first entrance into the wilderness.

My grandfather's family then consisted of my father, Nathan Barnes Greeley, and my aunts, Arminia, Matlier, and Margaret. My dear uncle Horace had been left in Vermont.

THE BEST IS ALWAYS THE CHEAPEST.
