DARWINISM IN THE KITCHEN.
I was taking off my bonnet,
One afternoon at three,
When a hissing jumped upon it
As proved to be a flea.

her lover, would have felt less secure in her conquest. For Clara had improved in spirits since her residence with Mr. Anson, and was even prettier than when she first came there.

feet upon the widow that Mrs. Morrow could have desired. She sank upon the sofa in her grief, very close to him. He wanted to console her, and so he took her hand. It was white, soft and warm.

member of his family, that he feels the confinement, the labor, the course food, or any of the hardships of his work. He always insists that he is doing well and takes an interest in his work.

WIVES' COLUMN.
Substitute For Coffee.
Now that it costs two bushels of corn to purchase a pound of old government Java, farmers naturally turn their attention, as they did in the early part of the war, to find a substitute for coffee.

eyes. "Mamma, not go to sleep," with a terrific little grab at her nose, which almost made the tears come, and after one or two vain attempts to still the little chatterbox, she was fain to take him down stairs before the prayer was over.

THE WAY SHE DID IT.
A liberal education, a handsome person, and a wealthy and indulgent father were among the agreeable things that were vouchsafed Robert Anson my dear madam," he said "I cannot find it in my heart to take Robert from you."

"Robert," she sobbed, I shall never see him again; I have nothing left to desire except your respect and esteem.

Mr. Anson drew her closer to him—so close that she lay trembling upon his breast, and he pressed a kiss on her forehead.

The Association will convene Tuesday evening, at 6 o'clock, Dec. 23d.

GENERAL ARDIE.
Aunt Hattie hears a little altercation below.
"Mamma, go up stairs and see Aunt Hattie," Ardie says.

Next Sunday, Ardie, when asked if he would be a good boy in church, replied "not," so Mamma had to stay at home with him and make up her mind to wait patiently for the time when the years Ardie should have learned the art of silence, so had a lesson for many to learn.

the outlook was certainly alluring to the lonely orphan, and she accepted the offer, returning to New York with Mr. Anson.

"What will you do?"
"I will secure your release by the widow."
"By fair means?"
"By her free consent."

A HEROINE.
Mrs. Watworth at Sing Sing.
[New York Correspondence of Boston Post.]
As I passed Sing Sing on the Hudson river road, on Tuesday, and looked up at the narrow, narrow windows in the prison, my heart ached for that inmate, and more especially for that unhappy young man, only twenty on the 17th of August, Frank Watworth.

Discussion of address led by Prof. W. W. Jones and Mrs. Eldridge.
11:45 A. M. Reports of Officers.
1:15 A. M. Address by Prof. S. B. Thompson. Subject—Agricultural Education.

There is no denying the fact that it is paid to the rising party by men of all callings and conditions. The other day a venerable preacher of the Christian persuasion was holding service in his church, which is the heart of a grange community.

What Ardie is writing all this she hears Papa behind reading the "Young Folks" to brother "Duffy" and when something very funny is read, and "Duffy" Papa and Mamma, all laugh. Ardie laughs, too from his little bed, as if he most fully appreciated it all.

As the return of Robert Anson was now daily expected, it may be well to follow him on his transatlantic voyage. He was barely embarked at Liverpool before his eyes fell upon the form of a decidedly handsome and dashing woman.

"You love my son?"
"What a question, Mr. Anson," she replied, showing her perfect teeth in a bewitching smile; "am I not going to marry him?"

What asks the London Spectator, is the inability of an editor to his personal friends? Strictly speaking he should have none; should attack his own father if he disproves his speeches, or lash his wife's last book if he thinks it rubbish.

When Aunt Hattie came home from her church she found mamma and Ardie there before her.
"Well, Ardie, were you good?"
"No, no naughty boy."
