MRS. MAYCOCK'S KEYS.

For some years I have been the owner of a bunch of keys-a good big bunch, of which, however, only two were practicable. For a long time I had resolved to sort that bunch of keys, most of which were waifs and strays. There were two or three latch-keys, one, I verily believe, of a house in London at which I lived fifteen years ago; one of a house in Brighton long ago given up dtis manibus. Memory refuses to affix titles to the rest. At last, however, a happy fate has relived me of the incubus of this useless bunch Late Editor of "Our Young Folks," which begins in the present number.
