treated in its pages. Its liberal policy and high literary tone have drawn to it contributions from some of the ablest of our statesmen. Many of these contributions are of the greatest importance, and give an inside view of our current history which could not otherwise be obtained. Secretary Welles has given its readers an inside view of our naval operations during the Rebellion, and in his late series of papers on Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Seward has given many exceedingly interesting revelations as to the position, views and acts of Mr. Lincoln and the leading members of his Cabinet on the great questions which engaged their attention. Mr. Thurlow Weed has given many interesting chapters from his Autobiography, touching on the most important events of his life, and his recollections of the great men with whom he has come in contact.

In the way of sketches of travel, essays, etc., Junius Henri Browne, Kate Hillard, Fanny Roper Feudge, and others will appear. Short stories may be expected from Mrs. Rebecca Hard-lany, and Geo, E. Pond the Drift-Wood articles. The articles on literature are prepared by the ablest hands. The "Galaxy" is in no sense sectional, but appeals to the whole country alike. It of will be glad to know also, f has a right to anticipate a success in the future, greater even than it has already attained. William C. Prime contributes a profusely illustrated paper on Pottery and Porcelain, full of novel and interesting information, now especially timely in view of the valuable works recently published relating to the Ceramic Art. Thousands of religious readers will read with peculiar interest Eugene Lawrence's article on City Road Chapel-where the last lessons of John PROSPECTUS Wesley were heard; where he was buried among his early companions; and from whose pulpit have gone forth "the leaders of a missionary throng, bearing to Europe, Asia, and America the simple faith of the latest reformation." The article is illustrated with portraits of the Wesleys-including a view also of John Wesley's tomb.
