THE PRAYER MOVEMENT.

Continued Spread of the Women's Praying Movement.—Its Progress in Ohio, and Its Appearance in Indiana. A Graphic Account of the Work in Richmond, Ind.—The Crusade Against Intemperance, and the Progress of the Movement at Xenia, Ohio.

The Temperance Praying Movement grows apace. From almost every portion of the country reports are received of the progress the ladies are making in the work of shutting up saloons and converting their keepers. Of course the largest measure of success attends their labors in Ohio, where the movement has been the longest in progress, and in some localities the ladies have abandoned the law, the latter being used only when the former is ineffectual. It is estimated that up to the last of this month over 1,500 saloons had been closed in Ohio, and their doors had been nailed up.

PERSEVERANCE CONQUERS.

TRUE LOVE. I would that every angry shaft would wing its flight to pierce my heart, To give to this relief. I would that every ill and woe, Would force their way within my breast, That I might never more be true.

NEAR the close of a superb midsummer day Marion Farrowe leaves her father's house with a novel on the piazza, and strolled through the sycamores and oaks, and the latter yet undetermined if she should go to the city or to the country. She had been thinking of the matter for some time, and was now trying to decide between the two.
