> A KENTUCKY paper reports what it and the mother 144. There was nothing extraordinary about the child at its birth, but when about the child at its birth, him a house, it occurred to him that it would be a good thing to have a wife. Accordingly Of course during his confinement he was comhe called upon a neighbor and informed him that he had turned wife-hunter, and wanted help. The rest of the story, in the language of the Fond du Lac Commonwealth, runs

"The neighbor promised to help in the search. He knew a worthy lady in England. She was poor, to be sure, but if she would consent to become a wife she would make a good one; no doubt on that score. He drew a glowing picture of the English girl, or woman, for she was more than a girl in years, being beyond thirty-five. Our young farmer hero thought she would fill the bill. It was arranged that both neighbor and farmer should write her. In due time an answer came. She, like Barkis, was willin', provided the young man would send her money with which to pay her passage to America. That he would do most gladly. A month after the money was sent our hero was at the Fond du Lac depot waiting for the train, having been advised that the dear one would make her appearance. She came. They knew each other, having exchanged photographs. She had a friend in the city. For a time her home would be with that friend. Two or three times a week the young man came in to visit the young lady who would soon be his wife. About three weeks after her arrival the young man came to the city to find his lady-love as chilly as a March snow-drift. She hardly spoke to him. Before he started home she deigned to speak to him. What did she say? This: report: Young man, I have made up my mind I don't want to marry you. Let this be your last visit.

bor who had recommended the English girl. not He was surprised and chagrined almost beyond measure. 'Well,' said he, 'I have got you into a scrape. Now you shall have a the two rode a distance of seven miles to the farm-house of a gentleman who was the possessor of five girls. In due time their business was made known. An acquaintance was commenced between our hero and one of the young ladies. The following week he made Scott, Sherman, Stevenson, Stewart, Stockton, Thurman, Wadleigh—30. Messrs. Morton and Ransom, who would have voted for the bill, were paired off with Messrs. Mortill (Me.) and Schurz, who would have voted against it... Executive her a second visit. That time they were enceremony took place. The happy couple enjoyed life for two or three days, at the end of which time the young man found it necesbusiness, leaving the bride with her folks. Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill was taken up and several amendments adopted in Committee of the Whole were disposed of, the one striking out the item for horses and carriages for the Department of Justice being rejected—who informed him that he was not wanted there. He was denied admission. To make bitterness doubly bitter, his wife raised the window and coolly informed him that he need never speak to her again-never for a moment claim her as his wife. What caused this sudden change on the part of the young wife and her people is yet a mystery to the young man and the public generally. But wasn't it strange? Did our hero pine? Not a bit. He drove to Fond du Lac, consulted a lawyer, and immediately instituted proceedings for a divorce. He is calm, resolute, and declares that

A little playmate was the victim, and he was cortured and finally killed, the method being the same and only varying in intensity from his former efforts in that direction narrated above. He was arrested and confined. When cars to and from connecting or intersecting asked why he committed the murder, he canasked why he committed the murder, he candidly replied "I could not help it." By nature, or probably by mental disease, the instinct of destruction and the promptings of a savage disposition dominated his will, and perhaps rendered him for the moment irresponsible. Of course this is no reason why he should be leniently dealt with; and while his age (fourteen years) and his mental infirmity may protect him from the gallows, he done with him.

Cheap Transportation.
