A San Francisco dispatch of Aug. 27 says: "The failure of the Bank of Cali-fernia, while immediately caused by a depositors' run, was directly the outcome of a conflict between two classes of Califor-nia speculators—one of the Bank of California party, headed by Mr. Ralston and Mr. Sharon, and the other headed by Messrs. Flood, O'Brien and Hidenfeldt. The latter party have established a bank in San Francisco called 'The Bank of Nevada,' with a cash capital of $5,000,000 gold and the right to increase to $20,000. 000. Incidental to this light there have been the mining properties known as the Savage, the Caledonia, the California, the Ophir and the Consolidated Virginia. The three latter are known as the 'Big Bonanza Mine, and the Bank of California party obtained control of them. In getting this control the stock of the California was run up from 60 to 800, and was then multiplied by five, which would make the highest price 160. It has since declined to 53. The Ophir stock, while they were getting control plied by five, making 700, representing 140 in new stock. It has since declined to 46. The Consolidated Virginia, during the process of getting control, advanced from 86 to 780. It was yesterday 267. That the bank had been strained of late and pinched has been evident to bankers here, who have shunned their bills from the fact that in the last sixty have been those of other institutions indersed by the Bank of California. The inference has been that the Bank of California had hypothecated securities with those who lent their bills; and that this borrowed exchange was used to obtain unds needed to carry on the large opera tions of the bank. The borrowed bills which have so appeared were those of the olumbia and the Bank of British North America."

Capt. Webb's Great Swim. CAPT. WRIB started yesterday on his swim across the Channel at the rate o twenty strokes to the minute. The weather was calm. At 5:30 he lunched on ale and beef-tea, and at eight o'clock beef-tea and beer. He then rested, floating on his back. At nine o'clock he was troubled with floating seaweed. At eleven o'clock cod-liver oil was given him. The moon rose at one in the morning. He indulged in brandy and tea. At this time Webb declared the accomplishment of the feat a sure thing. At three he partook of coffee, then the tide turned, running north ward, and the Captain appeared exhausthis services. His strokes at this time were at the rate of twenty per minute. Fears arose that the northern tide would drift him abreast of the Calais sands, and is the sequel proved be had four mile urther to swim. Daylight broke at four o'clock, finding him drowsy, when he in-dulged in coffee and brandy. At 5:30 Riden's buoys were sighted, and their position located. At seven there was a westerly breeze and chopping sea, re-tarding in their influences, and it was only indomitable pluck that insured suc-A skiff was kept on the weather Webb swimming slowly from this He indulged in brandy straight every twenty minutes. Soundings were taken at eight o'clock, and ten fathoms reported. Steamers now made their appear ance from Calais, and steamed along the weather side of the swimmer, breaking the sea. Cheers rang on incessantly, givng fresh hope to the gallant swhimer, who faid a direct course for Calais sands, westward of the pier. At 10:30 o'clock he was in shallow water, and at 10:40 to-day, incredible to relate, the brave Matthew Webb stood on land. He was tired, but soon recovered and was conveyed to a hotel in a carriage, where he was rubbed down and put to bed, and at one o'clock,

THE FAMILY RECORD.

Av, write it down in black and white-The date, the age, the name; For home has never seemed so dear

As since our baby came. No child before was half so sweet, And never babe so wise; And, John, the neighbors say, indeed, It has its father's eyes."

Nay, wife, I'm sure they're like your own; The rogue's his mother's boy How strange that such a tiny form Can cause such boundless joy! And you will have him named for me?

Come, think it o'er again; For 'John' is but a homely name-"Nay, do not drop your pen, For 'John' shall be his name, my dear, It is his father's own;
And though a hundred more were given,
Fill call him that alone.

His father's eyes, his father's face, His father's form, I'm sure; God grant he have his father's heart, Life's hardships to endure!' Well, there; 'tis written down at last; The record is complete. Henceforth we'll lay our loving hearts Beneath our baby's feet. Ah, wife, our home's an humble place-We're humble folks, that's true;

In that young rogue and you. So, baby, wink and blink, my boy. Nay, John,

But I'm a king with boundless wealth

Your mother's eyes-" "Na; They are his father's eyes, indeed; That I insist upon!" Well, be that as it may, his mouth Is waiting for a kiss. He's like you there, at least, my dear. Say, do I judge amiss?"

the angle which they subtend, corrected by the conjectured distance; for, the nearer the object, the greater the angle. And the distance of objects is usually conjectured from the angle they subtend, taken in connection with the brightness or haziness of their appearance; for distant objects are usually dimmed by the intervening atmosphere. It sometimes happens, however, that an object close at hand is dimmed by an unobserved haze, so as to seem to be at a distance; in which case, unless the spectator is able to correct the mistake by the force of reason, the object will assume in his conception gigantic proportions. A few years since a gentleman, well educated and by no means nervous, in riding along a public highway, saw in an adjoining field what seemed to him to be a wild beast of terrible aspect and monstrous proportions. Its body, equaling that of a half-grown hippopotamus in size, far exceeded it in uncouthness, and resembled nothing ever seen by him before, or described in books of natural history. Contrary to all rules of animal structure, its enormous body was nimbly borne by legs disproportionate-ly long and stender. And what was strangest of all was that this enormous creature was suspended in the air by a rope, to which it clang by some contrivance in its feet, and by which it slowly descended until, having reached a den or hole in the midst of a distant thicket, it plunged therein and disappeared. He was so astonished by the unearthly vision that he stopped his horse on the broad highway and watched the scene to its end. How was he to account for it? For, however incubus-like the scene, it was no dream, but a reality, to which his senses testified as positively as to his own exist-The little child, who watches with delence.
