I've been thinking some, Keziah,

Patchwork Philosophy.

While a sitting at my work, Though I ain't the sort of woman To let thinking make me shirk-Ez I say, I've been a thinking What a very curious way That our lives are patched together, Cut and fit 'em as we may !

It's a square of blue or crimson, Then a square of dark and light, Then a half of red and yellow, By a half of solid white; And with all our kalkilations Ez to how the patterns run. We can never tell eggsackly Until e'er the quilt is done.

There's that bit of blue, jes yonder, 'Tis as bright as a June sky, yet 'Taint your flimsy kind of cambric That you daren't as much as wet. It's been five-and-twenty summers Since that cambric gown was new, And these withered cheeks had roses

Then that laylock on the corner, It belonged to Betsy Wade : Shy was allus sort of shiftless, Buying what was sure to fade, But she somehow took folks' faucies; For men ne'er are otherwise

That was best set off by blue.

And the weakest sort of woman Can throw sawdust in their eyes. And that check 'twas off a weskit That I made for Abel Green, We was-yes, chile-nigh to married, Wheu-when Betsy came between; Wal, 'taint worth the talking over,

Howsoe'er the squares may fit, Ye kin never tell, till j'ining, Ez to how the colors hit. For the blue will spile the purple, And the laylock spile the gray, And the squares ye matched so certain, Will match jes the other way. And with all yer careful patching, You are allus sure to find

That the pattern, when it's finished, Ain't exactly to your mind. So, Keziah, I've been thinking, Here a-sitting at my work-Though I ain't the sort of woman To let fancies make me shirk-That our lives are like a patch-wor. With its squares of dark and light, Affd there's only One above us

LITTLE FOXES.

Who can do the J'ining right!

"Dear me! there comes Grandma Jarvis!" sighed pretty Mabel Lee, as she looked out of the window and saw an old lady coming across the lawn-a very queer looking old lady, in a plain gray gown, a dark purple shawl, and an oldfashioned silk calash, over her thickruffled cap.

An entertaining writer in the Colorado Farmer has the following good words for milk as a factor in dessert.

Among the many dishes of which milk is the standard material none require it more than desserts. We are so fond of something, as the children would say, to leave a pleasant taste in the mouth, that our dinners do not seem complete without a concluding delicacy. Desserts add but a trifle to housekeeping expences, especially those simply made of milk and eggs. With "Mother was frantically angry at saw.
