MATCH-MAKING.

"I wouldn't marry the best man that ever lived!" And she meant it, or, what answers the same purpose, she thought she meant it.

"Amused at your logic, most likely," said my friend, a bright-eyed young matron as she threaded her needle.

"What are you going to do when you are old?" persisted the mistress of the establishment.

"My dear Jennie—I shall be delighted to spend a month with you and your husband. There must be, however, one stipulation about my visit—you must promise to say no more about marriage."

"Did they succeed?" inquired Jennie, demurely.

"I don't think I quite understand you," said Miss Kent, perplexed.

little woman whom Jennie had determined she should marry.

"Who was that lady, Jennie?" Cousin Mark inquired in the evening.

"If you are not too busy, I should like to read you this article," and this is what Miss Kent would say.

"I don't think I quite understand you," said Miss Kent, perplexed.

"I don't think I quite understand you," said Miss Kent, perplexed.

"I don't think I quite understand you," said Miss Kent, perplexed.

Cousin Mark—"Now I must return to my business and my boarding house. Think of that, Miss Kent—boarding house—boarding house, for a man as fond of domestic life as I am Miss Kent."

"I wish I lived in San Francisco. You could always call upon me if you needed anything."

"I don't think I quite understand you," said Miss Kent, perplexed.

FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

Why Not the Girls?—A letter in all exchange very sensibly advocated the training of young girls in garden work as follows:

"I have pondered and wondered over this case. Why should not the girls have had this opportunity of learning to use pruning shears?"

"I don't think I quite understand you," said Miss Kent, perplexed.
