VEGETINE.
I will try Vegetine.

He did,
AND WAS CURED.

DELAWARE, O., Feb. 16, 1877.

Dear Sir—I wish to give you this testimony, Mr. H. R. STEVENS—

that you may know what Vegetine has done for me. About two years ago a small sore came on my leg; it soon became a large Ulcer, so trouble some that I consulted the doctor, but got no relief, growing worse from day to day. I suffered terribly; I could not rest day or night; I was so reduced my friends thought I would never recover; I consulted a doctor at Columbus, Ohio, followed his advice; it did no good. I can truly say I was discouraged. At this time I was looking over my newspaper, I saw your advertisement of Vegetine, the "Great Blood Purifier" for cleaning the blood from all impurities, curing Humors, Ulcers, &c.
I said to my family, I will try some of the Vegetine. Before I had used the first bottle I began to feel better; I made up my mind I had got the right medicine at last. I could now sleep well nights. I continued taking the Vegetine. I got three bottles. My health is good.
The Ulcer is gone, and I am able to attend to my business. I had about four hundred dollars for medicine and doctors before I bought a bottle of your Vegetine. At this time I am a well man, and in the house now. It is a most excellent medicine.

Very respectfully yours,
F. ANTHONI

Mr. Anthoni is one of the pioneers of Delaware, O. He settled here in 1834. He is a well-known gentleman, of the firm of F. Anthoni and Sons. Mr. Anthoni is extensively known, especially among the Germans. He is well known in Columbus, Ohio. He is respected by all.

IMPURE BLOOD.—In moist conditions of the blood are many diseases, such as salt-rheum, ring-worm, boils, carbuncles, sores, ulcers and itching. It is the condition of the blood that Vegetine cures these affections. As a blood purifier it has no equal. Its effects are wonderful.

Cured Her.
DORCHESTER, MASS., June 11.

Dear Sir, I feel it my duty to say one word in regard to the great benefit I have received from the use of one of the greatest wonders of modern medicine, Vegetine. I have been one of the greatest sufferers for the last eight years that ever could be living. I do sincerely trust that the Edmonton has done me a great deal of good, and that I am now in the best of health. For the last three years I have not been able to walk, and I must say I am now as well as ever I did, and I must say I owe it all to your blood purifier, Vegetine.

VEGETINE
Is better than any MEDICINE.

I have used H. Stevens' Vegetine, and like it very much. It is a most excellent medicine, and I feel that I am now in the best of health.
I have used one bottle of Vegetine, and I feel that I am now in the best of health.
I have used one bottle of Vegetine, and I

Falling Leaves.

They are falling, slowly falling, Thick upon the forest side—Severed from the noble branches Where they waved in beautiful pride.

They are falling in the valleys And the birds in sunny springtime First their dulcet music ring.

They are falling, slowly falling,
Close beside our cottage door—Pale and faded, like the loved ones That have gone forever more.

They are falling, and the sunbeams Shine in beauty soft around; Yet the faded leaves are falling—Lying on the grassy ground.

They are falling on the streamlet Where the silver waters flow, And upon its peaceful bosom Onward with the water go.

They are falling in the churchyard Where our kindred sweetly sleep—Where the idle winds of summer Softly o'er the loved ones sweep.

They are falling, ever falling, When the autumn breeze sighs—When the stars in beauty glisten Bright upon the midnight sky.

They are falling when the tempest Howls and the winds are wild, When the sunless winds and billows Sultry sigh forever more.

They are falling, they are falling, While our saddened thoughts still go To the sunny days of childhood, In the dreamy long ago.

And their faded hues remind us Of the bright hopes and dreams—
And like the falling leaves Cast upon the life streams.

A SON, NOT A SLAVE.

A room in the mansion of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bounce, which had years held the light and joy of the household, was deserted, a small table filled with trinkets stood in the front hall, and Dan Bounce, the adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bounce, stood in the front door, resting his head against the door post and gazing down the road.

Nineteen years before, Mr. and Mrs.
Bounce, being childless and forlorn, adopted the child of a respectable but poor neighbor, and named him Daniel.
Every advantage of education and every indulgence which they would have bestowed on one of their own offspring was given to the adopted child; if they failed to have exactly the same feelings toward him that people naturally have for their own, it never appeared in their treatment of him—at least, in their public treatment of him. We will venture to say that Dan himself, as he stood looking down the road with anything but a completely kindly feeling toward his foster parents, would have wondered.

Mr. Bounce remembered up to—well, a quite recent date, he received nothing of the nature of love from Dan, and from those whom he had learned to call father and mother. He had always been allowed to choose his companions and entertain them, at home when he pleased, and accept of their hospitality in return.

But one day not very long before the time when we saw him in the picture suggestive of an approaching farewell, he came suddenly to a point in his road of life where his mind and that of his benefactors took diverse ways. He had seen attending school in the city, not far away, and during the first week of his attendance found himself every day taking the same route homeward with a pretty brunette of his school whom he repeatedly overlooked, and with whom it was very agreeable to him to walk the little way which their routes lay together. He had seen her in the picture source of absorbing after thoughts, to tarry at the gate in a few moments' chat each day. Pretty soon he found himself looking forward to his impatient, experiencing with blissful and yet painful confusion, and thinking of with a strange mixture of pleasure and uneasiness, these daily walks in the highway and parting chats at the gate.
And I know you will believe me when I say it was not long before these meetings were anticipated by Dan by a walk in the dusk, a timid knock on the cottage door of Mr. Dale, and a call for Miss Mary Dale, into whose blushing presence he straightway carried his yet more scarlet face.

But these things in due time came to the ears of Mr. and Mrs. Bounce.
Well, what of that? What of that?
Why the dear child, in the picture mansion, the little satchel in the hall, and a young man soon grieved at heart standing in the door alone, is of that.
Dan never made a secret of his love (any farther than is always necessary to the very life of the tender passion), and he was as much surprised as you are—more surprised than you, for Dan was young—when his father and mother, who had been so indulgent in little things, now in the case of this first great thing that had ever happened to him, entered the picture mansion, and Miss Mary Dale was a laborer's daughter; Daniel Bounce was a gentleman's son; the passion, or fancy, or whatever it was, must be put under foot at once. Such was the only reason given for the objection, and let us pretend, for the present, that we believe it was the real reason. While this was all that Dan had to meet, he took to argument. But presently they reminded him of his past and what he owed them, and Dan's mouth was sealed. Though the meanness of this thrust fired him with indignation, and arguments in self-defense rushed to his lips, he was dumb. But he was not idle, and straightway he sought his duty, and chose his course. He declined to give up his attachment to Mary Dale, whereupon his life-long benefactors told him he must forfeit them.

Strange, he thought, that the first great joy that had come to him should be the cause of his forfeiting all that he had known before. Strange that the only one desire that had ever taken sole control of his breast should be the only one which those whom he had learned to love had ever balked.

Strange that his first visions of domestic bliss in a little home of his own making by and by, should be the reason for his packing his satchel to leave forever the only home he had ever known.

Strange that the first difference he had ever had with his benefactors should be sufficient to set him, with little more of this world's goods than he had brought with him nineteen years before, at the threshold waiting to be carried away, never to return. Strange that anything could force him to take his leave of cold hands and haughty eyes, and ride off into a strange world with nobody at the door to watch him out of sight.

But all these things were true, and Dan pondered them, with a choking throat, as he rode on to the city.

Dan went into a printing office in the city, and set at work to learn the trade of type-setting. He proved a ready learner, and in due time earned good wages. Meantime he often retraced his former school-day footsteps towards Mr. Dale's.

One day Mr. Benjamin Bounce threw the evening paper to his wife, telling her to look at the marriage column, which she did, and read aloud the following notice:

"DAVIS—DALE: At the residence of the bride's parents, on the 10th inst., by the Rev. Mr. Vestry, Daniel Davis and Mary Dale. No cards."

"Well, good!" exclaimed Mrs.
Bounce, looking up from the paper, "Dan didn't get her after all."

"Why yes, that's Dan. He's taken his bride, and more building. And now comes the Kearney County Review, a very creditable newspaper published in Minden, asking for an X—North Platte Republican."

Telegraphic Summary.
VICKSBURG, August 22.—The Yellow fever is attacking the negroes.
The number stricken to-day is estimated at fully 50 new cases. Ten deaths up to 3 p. m. There is a great need of physicians.

GRENADEA, August 23.—Truly we are a God-forsaken people and last night our little band felt that every man was doomed. In the midst of our deepest trouble and when most needed, the brave, untiring General W. J. Smith, vice-president of the Howard Association of Memphis, was stricken down with fever, which nearly sent a death blow to all hope to the noble little brotherhood of spartans heroically battling for the lives of stricken and deserted people. It is useless to attempt to describe the state of affairs. Trains will pass by us as though we were convicts; not a new face except Howard nurses have we seen for days, nor will we. The negroes are demoralized. Several stores were broken open last night and goods carried off and—right many more will follow the same fate, as we have not a man on the street—every one is at the bedside of some sufferer.

BOSTON, August 23.—Yellow fever contributions, up to noon amount to $3,000.

ST. LOUIS, August 23.—John F. Long late collector, has sent a check to Mayor Overstolz for $500 for the fever stricken people of Memphis, Vicksburg, Jackson, Grenada and New Orleans.

The Hebrew Young Men's Literary association has raised about 1,500 and sent $250 each to the Howard Association at Memphis, Vicksburg and Grenada.

NEW ORLEANS, August 23.—New cases, 123; deaths, forty.

NEW YORK, August 23.—Snp. Wm. for the south to-day. $292.
