LEONIE. "Miss Cameron, lazily looking out of a low window upon a garden

"What is the matter?" Mrs. Tollman asked, despairing.

"It's—it's—John, Miss Cameron, and, and so rapidly, as if the words were forced by a fear of her own inability to finish

"There was a piteous pleading in the woman's face," Leonie's face was blank, save from an air of polite interest.

"I had no appetite; I had no will," she said. "My Pills are marvelous."

"I've put my foot in it," John will never forgive me," said Mrs. Tollman, disconcerted.

"I can return to London," she said. "I've put my foot in it."

another man had done. A beauty and rich, Miss Cameron had looked upon more than one languishing suitor, and forgotten him when her momentary wooer fled.

"I have been here three months," she said, feeling her own heart ache at his misery.

"And you, you will go, certainly?" "Yes, yes, you will go, certainly."

"I will not have you say so," she said, lifting them to dazzling heights.
