They all do it; why shouldn't the MERALD? Though we believe with the Lincoln Journal that there is no need of individuals or newspapers rushing forward to tell who they are for, and who they won't vote for, at this juncture; that is to say, it is no particular mark of wisdom, nor is it very likely to affect the issue so far ahead. CONTINUED.

We re-publish part of our stock feeding notes and add many names, which we have gathered from a trip through the County, made by Mr. Pettee in company with Mr. H. K. Smith, of Bensley, Wagner & Bensley, a Chicasion business in cattle, hogs, grain, &c.

This list is not completed, it is not absolutely correct, but is the best way we have had yet to get at the value and amount of this business and presents valuable statistics for future use. We still hope to get some more as the north-western part of the County has not been traveled over at all yet. Mr. Smith, who ought to be a judge says these cattle will average fourteen hundred pounds, and at sixty dollars per head, which is a very low average, the enermous sum of three hundred thousand dollars is invested in the business, there being about five thousand head, we can now count up in the About two hogs run to every steer, so we can form some estimate of the hog crop. Now friends, farmers, don't growl and scold if every figure here is not right, you should send in your own statistics and then they would be sure to be right-we do the best we can and give us credit for what we do well and not for all the mistakes.

The Drunkard-Maker's Exhibit.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

It is somewhat remarkable that in all the great Industrial Exhibitions of these days, one branch of business, second to hardly any other in commercial, financial, and social importance is largely unrepresented. In the great exposition, at Philadelphia, as in other international exhibitions the mechanic, the artizan, the engineer, the farmer, the builder, the naval constructor, the teacher, the publisher, the machinist, the inventor, all have combined their skill; the ripe fruit of their physical and intellectual labor; and the congregated trophics of their toil are exposed as a grand index to human progress, as an open book in which the advancement of nations can be clearly read. Minerals in Arizona.

An Arizona correspondent writes: We are now at the root of the middle mineral channel of Globe District, where it crops out from the Pinal foot-hills. Here are two claims, known as the Casa Grande and the Casa Grande West. These claims show a wonderful strength of vein-matter, but very little copper-stain; while, on the same mineral channel northeasterly, and from 400 to 700 feet higher, the cop- rard St., Philade per forms a heavy percentage of the ore. Still farther northeasterly, and where the secondary formations have been ground away, the silver prevails. The Stonewall Jackson, which is evidently on this channel of mineral, confirms this theory; for here the copper has given place to native silver and masses of chlorides of silver.
