New York goes Democratic, probably, and Pennsylvania Republican.

The mud in Omaha is awful, Plattsouth is Heavenly compared with the mudpools of Neb.

We call attention to an article on Temperance matters from the Omaha Republican on the outside of this paper.

The Catholic church has joined with the English government in killing the Fenian "rebels" party in Ireland.

The brick kilns have shut off the fires for the season, [Neb. City News] Can't be doing as much building down there as we are here in Plattsouth.

A Corps of Missouri Pacific bridge builders have arrived at Falls City, Mo., to bridge the Nemaha river. Track-laying progresses at the rate of three-fourths of a mile per day.

The tragic death of Col. Smith at Omaha has no parallel in the previous history of the state.

Even in the early days, when we were considered rough, on the border and beyond the pale of civilization, no such dastardly deed disgraced the record, and the state owes it to herself that the cause of the deed, be ascertained and swift punishment meted to the assassin.

That he died a martyr to his sense of the duty he owed society in trying to have an obnoxious law enforced, there seems no doubt. No man in this state stood higher, had more friends than Watson B. Smith, and he is the last one whose death should come in this way.

Through the kindness of a friend we have the Milford Dispatch, with the funeral service over the graves of Senator Van Wyck's two children, and Col. J. H. Broadhead, the father of Mrs. Van Wyck.

The funeral services of both took place at the same time. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Jameson, of the M. E. Church, at Milford, Pa., on October 24th, 1881, in the Presbyterian Church of the same place.

The texts were: "Thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty."—1 Sam., 20 chap., 18 verse.

"Lovely and pleasant in their lives, in their death they were not divided."—11 Sam., 1 chap., 28 verse.

Col. Broadhead was 79 years, 9 mo's, and 16 days of age, and had been fifty years in the service of the public in some capacity.

In 1852 he was Prothonotary Clerk in that County, and in 1843 was appointed Judge of the County, and served ten years. Was then elected Treasurer, and when the office became elective was again elected Judge, and served five years, making fifteen in all.

He went to Washington in 1869; in 1867 was one of the commissioners to settle war claims in Virginia, and in 1868 on the same commission for claims in Indiana. In 1869 he was appointed to a position in the Treasury Department at Washington, which he held at the time of his death.

Of the children we know here: Meta, 1 year and 1 month old, and Marie Louisa, 8 yrs, 6 mo's and 19 days, were swept almost in a day from their loving parents' sight. They all sleep beneath the sod in the old home State, near the banks of the blue Delaware.

The late Lincoln Tribune, ex-Western World, the organ of the Good Templars, having died for want of support, the Beatrice Express says that one of the main reasons for repeated failures in the temperance work is that its supporters do not back the movement with the money that is actually necessary.

Our Election.

A CLEAN REPUBLICAN TICKET ELECTED

IN OLD CASS COUNTY ONCE MORE. We Laugh, We Crow, We Told You So. It Beat O'dition Donowoo.

LIKE the old man that lost the turkeys out of the "behind" part of his wagon because the boys stole the end gate—we can't do the subject justice; not exactly as the old man afforded, by cousin, for we're not on that train this time, but time and space choke off much of the rejoicing we would indulge in, over this great victory.

Cass County Republican from top to bottom; endways, sideways and cat a cornered even. No wonder the boys throw up their hats and the roosters crow. It is too early to predict all the good results that may flow from this campaign, and we do not want to make our democratic brethren feel any "worse" nor they do "just now," so hoping and wishing each and every officer elected will feel and act as if the honor and integrity of the party were in his hands and its future success depending on a faithful performance of duty, we leave the future to reap the benefit of this victory.

UNUSUAL DETENTION

at the Colonel's office and partially quieted her fears. She returned to her room, but as the time wore on and he did not come, she again arose and telephoned to the central office, asking that a boy be sent to Col. Smith's office. The operator replied that he was alone and had no one to send. She then stepped into the residence of Dr. Moore, a neighbor, asked the Dr. if he would not do something toward finding Mr. Smith, and was about two o'clock. The doctor telephoned to Kuhn's drug store at the corner of Fifteenth and Douglas streets, and Mr. Kuhn immediately dressed and stepped up to the Colonel's office to see if he was there. There was a light in the post-office in the first floor, but the upper rooms and hall were apparently dark and dead.

A COLD HAND

evidently that of a corpse. Mr. Kuhn at once concluded that the body was that of Col. Smith, rushed down stairs, and tapping at the window of the ladies' delivery, requested Mr. Kenniston, the clerk in charge, to come up with him, telling him the situation. Mr. Kenniston replied that the office work was behind and that it would be impossible for him to leave at that time, but advised Mr. Kuhn to go out and find a policeman. Mr. Kuhn ran down Douglas street to Fourteenth and down Fourteenth to Fairmount, where he found Officer O'Donohoe, who returned with him, stopping on the way to telephone Dr. Moore that Col. Smith was dead.

A DREADED SIGHT

On arriving at the door of Col. Smith's office the officer lighted the gas in the hall, and the nature of the terrible tragedy was discovered. Col. Smith lay upon his back upon the stone floor, with his head toward Dodge street and his feet in front of his office door. His right arm was about his neck and his overcoat unbuttoned, indicating that he had thrown it on hurriedly in order to take the last street car for his home. His hat lay beneath his feet, as he had fallen, and was in a large pool of clotting blood, which extended over several square feet of the floor. A postal card, and two business letters and a bundle of newspapers lay a short distance from his feet, as he had dropped them in falling. The butt end of a with one barrel discharged, was discovered protruding from the left pantalon's leg, apparently having been placed there by the assassin, after the body had fallen. The keys were in the door which stood ajar. Looking more closely at the head an ugly hole was seen in the left side, apparently made by a blow. Subsequently, however, it was found to have been made by a bullet, which passed through the head, made an indentation on the north wall, and fell to the floor where it was subsequently discovered. The revolver from which it was fired, was a self-cocker, of the bull dog pattern, with a curved wooden handle and silver plated trimmings.

THE MURDER

From the location of the wound, the keys, etc., it would appear that the Colonel had placed the keys in the door before turning out the gas, had been extinguished the light, and was shot as he emerged from the door. The murderer evidently stood facing the window and at the Colonel's left as he emerged from the door. The moon was shining brightly outside, and facing the window the assassin

FOUL MURDER.

Col. Watson B. Smith, Clerk of the U. S. District Court,

MURDERED AT HIS OFFICE DOOR IN THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POST OFFICE AT OMAHA.

Great Excitement.

From the Telegram.] Col. Watson B. Smith, clerk of the United States district court, was murdered at his office door Friday night, at some unknown hour, the dead body being found at about 2:40 o'clock. No clue to the assassin has yet been found.

Col. Smith returned Friday afternoon from David City, where he had been with a party of visiting friends of Mrs. Smith, leaving his wife and children to complete their visit. That evening, as is frequently his habit, he came down to his office to attend to some business, leaving his house at about 7 o'clock. His mother, the only member of the family who was in the city, became awakened at about 11 o'clock, and seeing that Mr. Smith had not returned, arose and dressed, and went into the residence of a neighbor. They persuaded her that he had been some probably had sufficient light to distinguish the outline of the Colonel's form when he came out, and then fired the fatal shot. The murderer must have been of the most desperate character spot, with post office officials at work on the first floor, and with a signal service officer on the floor above.

CORONER JACOBS was soon summoned and made a brief examination of the body, deciding to leave it there till daylight, and leaving Officer O'Donohoe to watch it.

THE VERDICT. The jury after consultation found the following verdict: That the deceased came to his death at the door of his office in the U. S. court house and post office in the city of Omaha, Nebraska, after ten o'clock and fifteen minutes, on the night of November 4, 1891, by a gun shot wound through the head, inflicted by some persons to the jurors unknown, and we do further find that the killing was a premeditated and malicious murder.

JOHN B. FURAY, JAMES STEPHENSON, E. J. MCNEANE, A. A. TRINSON, A. W. PHELPS, D. L. SHANE. NOTES. An immense meeting was held in the Academy of Music on Saturday evening, and on motion of Mr. Touzalin, a subscription of $10,000 was started, to aid in prosecuting the murderer. Over $5,000 were raised at once, and $5,000 offered as a reward for the capture of the assassin, and the rest to be devoted to legal and other expenses, under the supervision of Mayor Boyd.

The Bar Association of Omaha and Lincoln met and passed resolutions of condolence and denunciation of the deed.

The Governor offers $500, reward for the capture and punishment of the perpetrators.

The Merchants Association of Omaha offers $500, for the same purpose.

Likewise the Good Templars offer $200 to aid in the punishment of the cowardly brute.

Col. Smith had been active in the enforcement of the new liquor law and had received threatening cards and letters in consequence, and there is some ground to believe that his murder grew out of the feeling created for or against the liquor question, and as a supposed punishment for his endeavor to have the present law enforced.

Omaha was stirred at its seldom has been moved, and the excitement has scarcely subsided at this writing.

In this connection I will call attention to the fact that there is no other regular meeting before the meeting on Tuesday, the 13th, of December, of the first meeting in December, at which Officers are to be elected for the ensuing year. All the officers of the Post, and especially the old charter members are particularly requested to be present at this meeting as matters of particular import to the future welfare and continuance of the Post are likely to come up and the entire Post should turn out. Our dues to the State Department and the business of the year should be settled, before the election of new officers, and in many respects it is highly important that all the old members and especially the charter members of the Post should be present. Remember the date.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

The Daily "Journal" the new Democratic paper made its appearance Saturday. It is an exceedingly neat, five column paper, patent inside, well printed, and well edited. It comes out square for Democracy, as they understand it, and we like that. While we have our own opinion about a daily paper in Plattsouth, Messrs. Sherman and Howard are welcome to try it a spell. "The eternal principles" of the old party, Brother Sherman talks about, will wait till some other time, when I haven't so many "lection figures" on hand.
