

Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

CICELY.

By BERT HARTZ.

Cicely says you're a poet? Maybe, I ain't much on rhyme.

I reckon you'd give me a hundred, and beat me every time.

Forty-two that's the way some chaps put up an idea, but I take mine 'straight without sugar,' and that's what's the matter with me.

Poetry—just look round you—alkali, rock and sage-brush, rock and alkali; can't it be pretty good?

But in the East at morning, sun in the West at night, and the shadow of this year station the only thing moves in sight.

Poetry? Well, no, Polly; Polly, run to your man; you'll find him, my poetry? By-ge! And she's a lamb!

Poetry? That reminds me of 'sublimity' right in that suit.

Just what that dear, that dear, will 'er right in 'er ears is true.

Ye noted Polly, the lady? A month ago she was here, and she was a beauty.

Cicely (my old woman) was mostly like and forlorn; out of her head and crazy, and talked of flowers and trees;

Family man yourself, sir? Well, you know what a woman she is.

Narcosis she was and restless—said that she couldn't stay.

Stay and the nearest woman seventeen miles away.

But I fixed it up with the doctor, and he said he would be on hand.

And I kinder liked 'er the shanty, and fenced in that bit of land.

One night—some tenth of October—I woke with a chill and a fever.

For the door it was standing open, and Cicely was in the night.

But a note was pinned on the blanket, which it said that she 'couldn't stay.'

But had gone to visit her neighbor—seventeen miles away?

When and how she stumped, I didn't wait for to know.

For out the road, next mornin', I started as well as she.

Running first this way and that way, like a bound.

For these things no track in the darkness to let me know.

I had some mighty mean moments afore I knew to the plains in '90, drownded almost, and shot.

But out on this alkali desert, a hunting a crazy wife. Wasn't as satisfactory as anything in my life.

"Cicely? Cicely? Cicely?" I called and I held my breath.

And "Cicely?" came from the canyon—and all was still as death.

And "Cicely? Cicely? Cicely?" came from the rocks below.

And just but a whisper of "Cicely" down from the plain.

I ain't what you call religious; but I just looked up to the sky.

And this way 'er what I'm comin', and maybe you think I lie.

But up away to the eastward, yaller and big and blue.

I saw of a sudden rising, the singiest kind of star.

Big and yaller and dancing, it seemed to beckon to me.

Yaller and big and dancing, seem to you never see?

Big and yaller and dancing, I never saw such a star.

And I thought of them things in the Bible, and I went for it then and there.

Over the bench and bowlers I stumped and pushed about.

Keeping the star afore me, I went wherever it led.

I might have been for an hour, when sudden and 'er and high.

Out of the yearth afore me that riz up a big 'er cry.

Listen! that's the same music; but they are strange new notes.

That they I packed her and her mother—I'm durned if I just know.

But the doctor when the next mornin'; and the joke that 'er never knew what happened from that very night to this!

But Cicely says you're a poet and maybe you might some day.

Just kind of a rhyme about a baby that was born in a curious way.

And she was the same; and, old fellow, when you speak of the star, don't tell.

As how 'twas the doctor's lantern-for maybe 'twas sound as well.

lawyer's letter, that clouded the brown eyes, and gave the sensitive, mobile mouth a firmer pressure than was quite natural.

His father had been dead six years, and his business affairs having become complicated in some way not comprehensible to feminine intellect, his widow and child found themselves reduced to an income that barely covered the necessities of life.

It had been understood from the time Jessie was a tiny baby, that she should inherit the fortune of her maternal aunt, from whom she was named, and who came from the city every summer to spend a month or two in the little cottage, always bringing pretty presents to brighten the home of her brother's widow, and lavishing tenderest affection upon her niece.

Yet, though Jessie herself had known of her aunt's supposed intentions, neither she nor her mother had ever made calculation upon a fortune dependent upon the death of the one for whom they felt the warmest affection, and the idea that others could be influenced by it was a new thought to the young girl.

She had given to her betrothed, Charlie Seaton, the first love of her young heart, believing that his love was all her own. In the six years she had lived in Morton, child and maiden, Charlie Seaton had been her devoted admirer from the first, and had recently finished his course of law study and been admitted to the bar.

Answering her mother's call, Jessie nestled down in her favorite seat at her feet, saying: "What is there to wait for, if you hope to see your money, mamma, it is better to know it now. I had supposed we would have to wait for our wedding-day until he had some practice, and you know I have a little sum of my own towards first expenses. We could live here, and there, I will think of a city if two of them could not do it entirely."

"While you wait, dear," said her mother, "shall I tell you what I think is the explanation of your aunt's singular will? You, who knew her only as the gentle, sad woman of her late years, have possibly imagined I presume, that she was once as bright, hopeful, and sunny-tempered as yourself. I think it is to save you from her own sorrow that she has taken from you the power of giving wealth to a mere fortune-hunter. She would have you wooed and won for yourself alone, and as she has no other power, I presume, to be her heiress, she has probably never supposed Charlie biased by that hope. Still, dear, it is possible."

"Yes, it is possible," said Jessie, slowly; "but tell me about Aunt Jessie."

"Your grandfather Markham, Jessie, was one of the leading merchants of New York when your aunt, his only daughter, was introduced into society. Your uncle Hoyt was in good practice as a physician, your father doing then a fair business, and already married and in his own home."

"It was, therefore, with the name of an heiress that Jessie danced through her first season, a careless, light-hearted girl, very pretty and accomplished, to make a pleasing impression wherever she went. She was but a little over twenty when she became engaged to Stanley Horton, the most fascinating and in all our circle of friends. No only handsome and talented—and he was both—but possessing in a remarkable degree the courtly polish and winning grace of manners that go so far toward gaining a woman's heart."

"The absorbing love Jessie felt for him, and the mutual and congratulatory feelings between the two, which had established that loving circle which makes home of any house, however grand or however humble."

"During the wedding tour of the young couple, Mrs. Markham, at their earnest solicitation, took an affectionate farewell of her pupils, and removed her household treasures to the New York mansion, to which, in due time, came Charlie and Jessie to brighten the long silent rooms with their happiness, and established that loving circle which makes home of any house, however grand or however humble."

"The first love of her life was the last. She was your grandfather's comfort until he died, and then went to keep house for Hoyt, who lost his wife and baby one year after his wedding day. When he died he left her his house and his money, and she lived there till she died. Still I know she loved you, and I am quite sure her will is not designed so much to keep you single as it is to win the interested love of your future husband."

still love and happiness for her yet. And then a bright face crowned with curly brown hair would come before her, and she knew that neither the handsome house nor the comfortable income could ever fill her heart if Charlie left an aching void there.

Suddenly, like a gust of wind, there swept into the little sitting-room a tall, broad-shouldered young man, in a gray broad suit and slouch hat, which latter article found a resting-place upon the floor, as the giant leaped himself before Jessie in an attitude of grim defiance that sent thrills of glad music into her heart.

"Will you have the kindness, Miss Markham," said the intruder, towering in his six feet of manhood over Jessie's low seat, "to tell me what you mean by this letter Polly handed me? Was it not understood that you and I were to share this cottage with your mamma until I attained sufficient legal eminence to warrant the purchase of a brown stone front in New York? Was I not deluded in the belief that your presence in the culinary department of our establishment was to reduce our income to the limits of our present income? Was it not represented to me that my present board was sufficient to meet the requirements of two in this domicile? In short, Miss Markham, in what way was I ever led to suppose that the fortune of your spinster aunt was to influence in the slightest degree your matrimonial intentions in regard to myself? I pause for a reply."

Jessie stood up, her hands meekly folded together, and her happy eyes downcast till the long lashes kissed her cheek.

"Please forgive me this time, and I'll never do it again," she said; "and then the laugh dimpled her cheek, danced in her eyes, and rippled out clear and sweet upon the air."

"Oh, Charlie! Charlie! I know you never thought of Aunt Jessie's money, to register a letter; and all postmasters are obliged, when required, to register a letter."

"Internal revenue stamps cannot be used by post postage. Stamps cut from stamped envelopes are not allowed to be placed upon other letters."
