Editors in Congress.

[Washington Cor. Chicago Times.] It is a bit curious to run the eye over both branches of the present Congress and pick out the men who are, or have been, journalists. The number is increasing yearly. In the good old times men who hoped to do the State some service in the way of legislation usually took the legal road. The political seat was then generally reached by scrambling over the bar and bench. Sometimes, in the kindness of the popular heart, the successful militia hero, or the man who had attained eminence in commercial pursuits, was allowed to do the national chores. But old Father Antic, the law, saw to it that his own children were awarded the majority of the present political plums. By and by a strange race of nervous, pushing fellows, around whose jackets hung a faint odor of printer's ink, began to creep into the comfortable chairs of General Assemblies and Congress. Very useful chaps they had been to help make public officers of the lawvers and others, but was it not a little audacious when they commenced making public officers of themselves? More alarming than all was the fact that when this leaven of press delegates began to work in the Congressional loaf it was discovered that the new element was so efficacious that it could never again be slighted. So it remained and waxed powerful. To-day there are few of the head-working political men in Senate or House who have not, at some period, driven the burning quill and fashioned the potent leader in a newspaper office.

Let me pick them out. In the Senate are Schurz, Sargent, of California, and Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine, ex-Vice-President. Kansas honors herself by sending two editors to the Senate, Ingalls who engineered the Atchison pany shall not exceed 1,000,000 shares Champion for several years, and Crozier, once published the Leavenworth Daily Times. Cameron, of Pennsylvania, was also an editor, and so were Brownlow, of Tennessee, and Sener, of Virginia. Sumner and Stockton may also be counted in, for, while they have never owned newspapers, they have written to St. Louis and Chicago, the corporafor them, and have each compiled valu- tion is authorized to contsruct such able books, which is almost as credit- other branches as in the judgment of able as to be an editor.

Senator Sherman, of Ohio, addressed the Senate the other day on finance, the currency, and specie resumption.

He argued that it had been practicable during the last four years to advance our notes to specie value. If not, when would it be? Should the redemption of the pledge be postponed until the public debt be paid? One-tenth of the amount of money which had been used to pay public debts not due would have brought the country to specie payment.
This thing of postponing the fulfillment of our promise could not be longer maintained with a view of reducing the public debt. If we postpone redemp-tion in order to pay the public debt it will be many long years before this "consummation most devoutly to be wished" can be reached. If the inflationists wanted $100,000,-000 more now, how long would it be before they would want another $100 .-000,000 more? Men would always be in debt, and always be demanding an increase of currency. Where would it lain in bed about ten years, all of the stop? Just where our ancestors stopped family were on one occasion absent at the close of the revolution. An Ill-Treated Lad Eleven Years of Age Hangs Himself.

We find in the Wellsville Free Press an extraordinary one that we republish it, this morning : The name of the boy is Eugene, and that of his father is William Johnson. It would appear that the boy and his sister, aged 11 years, have always been objects of aversion to both their parents, and that from infancy they have been subject to the most inhuman and brutal treatment. Kicks and blows have been administered for every little childish offense, and that these have only been varied by cruel and unmerciful whippings whenever the anger of the unnatural father has been more than usually aroused. It is said that the boy, failing at times to find the cows when he has been sent for them, has remained in the woods for nights and days together, rather than to return to his home and undergo the excessive punish-ment which he knew would be inflicted. Fer weeks past he and his sister have been compelled to cut from two and one-half to three cords of wood per day with a cross-cut saw, under penalty of a with a cross-cut saw, under penalty of a severe beating. Last Sunday the parents went to a neighbor's to supper, rents went to a neighbor's to supper, leaving the children at home; but, be-

Returning to his house in the afternoon on some errand from the neighbor whom he was visiting, he ascertained that his instructions in regard to the horses had not been complied with, and at once commenced beating and abusing the boy in the most outrageous manner. When he became weary of torturing the child, he left the house and went back to the neighbor's to finish his visit. Shortly after he left, the poor boy, according to his sister's statement, gathered up his play-things and put them away in a little box, and then went to the barn. Being gone a long time, the girl followed him to the barn, where she found him dead and hanging by the neck to a beam .-Buffalo Express.

Inter-State Commerce-Mr. Hurlbut's Project.

A Dignified Mon.

The human heart, in all its expansive, limitless capacity for enjoyment, takes greater pleasure in nothing more than witnessing a portly, solemn-visaged man, the embodiment of natural dignity, and importance in clothes, administer a scathing rebuke to some "smart" petty official. One morning lately just such a personification of innate dignity loomed up at the stamp window of a postoffice, and glared in gloomy and majestic displeasure at the busy clerk registering a letter, before he sprang to the window and asked the stately customer what he wished. The great man did not answer for several moments. He gazed steadily and impressively over the clerk's head, and then asked, in pnderous tones :

"Is there any one here-r-re-who attends to business?

The embarrassed clerk blushed, faltered for a moment, then, recovering himself, said, with characteristic and national cheerfulness becoming an official of the republic: "I will see, sir.'

And he disappeared. He went into another department, tortured a carrier with an original conundrum and heard a good story in the mailing-room, and came back.

"Yes, sir," he said to the great one : there are, in addition to myself, three clerks in the letter department, one in the mailing room, four carriers, three route agents, the mail-driver and a janitor.

"Ah-h-h! I am glad there are so many. I may, in all that number, find one who is at his post."

And then he looked as impressive as Special Agent, and was silent for three minutes, while the impassive clerk awaited his orders, and impatient men behind fidgeted and grumbled. Finally the great man said, with deep solem-

"I wish one three-cent stamp." The clerk tore off the stamp and held it, waiting for the consideration. The great man made a somewhat longer pause than usual; he felt in his various vest pockets; he gradually lost his look of impressive rebuke, his chest caved in, and he assumed the aspect of an ordinary frail mortal, and he said :

"Ah-the fact is-I'm sure-ah-in short, I find that I have carelessly left my purse at home. Can you kindly-The passive clerk, with the faintest suggestion of triumph in his eye, waved the great man aside with :

"Sorry for you, sir, but the clerk who sells on credit is not in. What does the next man want?" And we felt so good to see how that clerk was taken down by the dignified man that he went away and laughed for
