The Women's Crusade.

When the women of Ohio began their assault npon the liquor shops, almost everybody supposed the movement would be nothing more than the fleeting excitement of an hour. The ladies would parade the street, and assemble in the churches, and sing bymns, and raise their voices in prayer; would carry about the pledge for signatures, and thrust the pencil into trembling and beery hands; would keep little towns and villages in turmoil for a few days, and exact all sorts of impossible promises from unwilling sinners; but we were not to expect a practical result from such extraordinary and irregular proceedings. Even if the women were stout enough of heart to withstand the jeers, and insults, and brutal remaks that would certainly assail them, and vigorous enough in body to endure the long watch of prayer, hour after hour, day after day, from early morn till the night was far spent, the time must soon come when the spiritual excitement that inspired the crusade would die away, to be followed by the inevitable reaction. But two months have now passed, and the women are more earnest than ever. Driven ont of the bar-rooms they kneel in the muddy streets; which may be cleaner after all than sanded floors bestrewn with the refuse of conviviality. They mind neither the cold winds nor the pelting rain. All manner of engines of defense have been brought up against them without avail. Here an unregenerate saloon-keepers throws snuff into the midst of the praying band. There an irate ruffian assaults them with a poker. Vulgar caricatures are displayed in the shop windows. Coarse jests are heard as the crusaders march through the streets. The law is invoked to prevent trespass upon private premises and interference with legal occupations ; and in this part of the defense it is important to notice that the wholesale liquor dealers are helping the rum-shop keepers with money. Nevertheless the crusade goes on, and the roll of victory lengthens every day.

It is apparent that we have all underrated the strength of a woman's enthusiasm and devotion. The generous and Christian impulses are something more than outbursts of sentiment; they are important forces in the government of society. If the Ohio temperance movement can be guided with reasonable discretion, it may regenerate the whole region. It will not, of course, destroy intemperance, and probably it will not permanently check the sale of liquor; but it may make drinking more disreputable, and save thousands of men whose case is not yet hopeless.-New York Tribune.

Directly they all seemed to have forgotten that they had partners, and settled down into dancing. There was some peculiarity about every individual, but in every one was observable a sort of ecstacy. One girl, with wild, dark eyes, and her black hair hanging loosely around her neck, would occasionally pause, as if trying to recollect where she had acted such a part in other scenes. but, glancing at the company all engaged around her, she would resume manufactures, $90,000,000 in seventyher motions. Thirdly, newspapers may be warned, and afterward become forfeited. Fourthly, the sale of gunpowder and arms is subjected to stringent rules. Fifthly, grand juries are authorized to present moneys to be levied for payment of compensation to persons whose relatives have been murdered, or to persons who have been themselves injured. "Every one must have observed what are usually called the whiskers on a cat's upper lip. The use of these in a powers of different minds under hard state of nature is very important. They are organs of touch. They are attached to a bed of close glands under the skin, and each of these long and stiff hairs is connected with the nerves of the lip. The slightest contact of these whiskers with any surrounding object, is thus felt most distinctly by the animal, although the hairs are themselves insensible. They stand out on each side in the lion, as well as in the common cat; so that, from point to point, they are equal to the width of the animals body. If we imagine, therefore, a lion stealing through a covert of wood, in an imperfect light, we shall at once see the use of these long hairs. They indicate suddenly vault into a position requiring to him, through the nicest feeling, any severe mental toil generally die before obstacle which may present itself to the passage of this body; they prevent the rustle of boughs and leaves, which would give warning to his pray, if he were to attempt to pass through too close a bush ; and thus, in conjunction

A young man, cast suddenly into a position involving great care and responsibility, will break down; whereas, had he been gradually habituated to this position, he would bave performed its duties without difficulty. It is probably for this reason that the professional classes generally suffer less from the effects of overstrain than others. They have had a long course of preliminary training, and their work comes to them by degrees ; therefore, when it does come in excessive quantity it finds them prepared for it.
