Our Washington Letter. WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 15 1879. Last night was a jubilee season for Washington Republicans over the result in Ohio and Iowa, and a damper for Democrats. The late system of banking adopted by the Democrats, per order of J. G. Thompson, Thurman's man, had realigned some apprehensions in the mind of Republicans, and there was great anxiety to hear the news. As early as 6 o'clock the cheering through began to gather about the points of interest, the newspaper offices, and the Republican headquarters. The first news was democratic news—that is to say, no news at all except for gamblers. Many saw game Boston gamblers had bet on Esch's election, but the signs were early against them. So at an early hour, early for any dispatches, the bulletin of the Democratic organ announced that dispatches from Cincinnati gave the Democrats a large majority in that county and probably 15,000 in the state. This explained a danger to have the Esch campaign a chance to hedge by being content themselves with the odds. The thing did not hold water. It was quite before any definite news came. But when at last it did come, the great crowd of Republicans headquarters made the right sound with their shouts. Nearly all night the Republicans kept up the cheering. But the Democrats shut up shop early and went home. Of course there was a great deal of talk as to the credit to be accorded for this grand victory, but the disposition to award it partially Senator Sherman, Charles Foster and General Garfield have been the Southern and Western and the Republican possibilities. But it was noticeable that the Ohio news gave credit to Senator Rainey and Chandler, Congressmen. Fry and Reed and most others from outside the state. I think the greatest rejoicing was over the greatest triumph, giving us a senator in place of Thurman, and this putting a question upon that long-ago Senator's future as a politician, and giving us the power to return to the nation's government with the best of us, and to our own advantage. It is a great day for the Republic, and a great day for the Union, and a great day for the world. President Hayes has a letter to read, and has a great deal of work to do. He has a great deal of work to do. He has a great deal of work to do. He has a great deal of work to do.
