

THE RED CLOUD CHIEF.

H. J. THOMAS, Publisher. RED CLOUD, NEBRASKA.

MY LITTLE BOY THAT DIED.

Look on my face for just one minute. His faded cheeks, his dancing eyelids...

How many another boy as dear and charming. His father's hope, his mother's one delight...

And I was a long time in parents' sight. Mine was not a long or a proud life.

I see him rocking on his wooden chair. I hear him patting through the house all day.

I watch his great blue eyes grow large and large. Listening to stories, either grave or gay.

But yet I often think my boy is living. As living as my own children are.

When I look at my little boy I find him. I see him in the face of every child.

So, while I come and plant it over with daisies. (Nothing but childhood daisies, all year round.)

Continually God's hand the curtain raises. And I see him in my mother's face.

My little boy that died. Author of "The Boy in the Boat."

THE TWO CLERKS.

In Market Square, in the pleasant city of Albany, there was a crockery store...

Mr. Benjamin Hudson had grown rich in his business, for he had managed it all his life...

Mr. Hudson's clerks were two young men—Herbert Bond and Charles Schmour.

Charles Schmour knew very well the reason of Mr. Hudson's choice...

PECULIARITIES OF LOCOMOTIVES.

How They Sometimes Act Like Humans—A Chat with an Old Engineer.

"He's in the dumps because his locomotive has been off for three or four days."

"It is a queer thing. There's my engine, one of the best on the road, in perfect order."

"And why can't you? How far is it from here?" asked his employer.

"Twenty-five miles, sir, rather far to travel every day, and then I can't afford the expense."

"What time would you reach the store in the morning?"

"At half-past eight, sir."

"And you would have to leave at what hour in the afternoon?"

"At about half-past five, sir."

"Not very bad hours for the business. Perhaps it is arranged so that you can live at home, Herbert."

"O, I should like it so much if I could. I am so homesick here in the city."

"Well, I'll be into the matter, Herbert. It seems a pity that one who is so fond of his home can't live there."

"I should like to see the old place, and to see my mother and father."

"I'll be into the matter, Herbert. It seems a pity that one who is so fond of his home can't live there."

A Lazy, Labor-saving Age.

So into the midnight train we climbed, and the locomotive started on its way.

"It is a lazy, labor-saving age," the tall, thin passenger said.

"And yet," said the passenger put in, "there never was an age of greater or more incessant activity."

"People burn gas," said the tall, thin passenger, "disregarding the other's statement, because they are too lazy to do it."

"Yes," said the passenger with the sandy goatee, "and they light it with electricity to save the trouble of scratching a match."

"And it is a lazy man," said the man on the wooden box, "that sat around cold winter mornings, and shivered and shuddered, and wished he could get into the stove."

"That need not keep him back," said the tall passenger, "because he can get into the stove by the elevator."

"That need not keep him back," said the tall passenger, "because he can get into the stove by the elevator."

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

The Table. —Ginger Cake. Two eggs, one cupful of sour cream, one cupful of molasses, three cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of ginger, all little salt.

—Cocoa. Take two heaping cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of butter, one cupful of sour cream, three eggs, four teaspoonfuls of soda and eight of cream tartar.

—Apple Charlotte. Butter a deep tin with lard, and mix with it a little sweet cream, fill the bowl to within one inch of the top with sliced apples in layers, with beef marrow, sugar and lemon juice, cover with a layer of apples with thin slices of bread soaked in cream; cover the bowl closely with an ordinary earthenware pie-dish, in which place water to prevent its cracking.

—Angel Cake. The whites of eleven eggs, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one cup of flour, one small teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and one teaspoonful of vanilla.

—Coffee. Get good coffee, and then see it ground, or have it ground in your own mill. This may be done by using a not bad chaffery, then measure two cups into a bowl, into which break a fresh egg, putting in the shell also, then add a little cold water, just enough to make it stiff, and mix it up in a common tin coffee-pot, add about three cups of boiling water, and cover very closely that the aroma may not escape.

—To Preserve Soap-grease. Fill a cork half pint of good strong vinegar, drop all your refuse grease therein; stir up the mixture once a week.

—Newly-painted rooms are very unpleasant for many days, but if a handful of hay may be strewn on the floor, which is sprinkled with little chloride of lime, after a couple of hours of the offensive smell will have entirely disappeared.

—Spots on furniture. From any thing but from tooth, and can be removed by rubbing hard with sweet oil and turpentine. When the spots disappear wash in milk-warm soap-suds, dry quickly, and polish by rubbing briskly with chamois.

—To extract mildew from linen, put strong soap and salt on the mildew spots. Keep them moist and separate them. Repeat the process several times. The soap used should be of the best, such as is home-made from the lye of wood-ashes.

—A good way to get rid of rats is to brew a pot of potato-peel soup, and drop the potato-peels into their holes and irritate their skin, and the rats desert their holes and becoming offensive, they are driven out by the smell of the soup.

—To keep channels from shrinking wash them in a suds made with tepid water, avoid rubbing soap on them, rub them in two waters, rise in tepid water, and shake out each article immediately, hang up immediately in the sun or wind to dry.

—Wedded Love—A True Incident. "Make the bed easy, Mr. B.," said old Uncle Abe to the undertaker, who was preparing the coffin for his aged wife.

—A Mountain of Glass. Another marvel recently brought to light in the Yellowstone Park of North America is nothing less than a mountain of obsidian, or volcanic glass.

—Butter-Making. This effect is produced by making five cups of milk, and adding one cup of cream, and then adding the cold water, so as to suddenly cool and break it up by shirking. Large quantities were in this way detached from the solid sides of the mountain, and broken up by sledge hammers and picks, not, however, without severe lacerations of the hands and faces of the men from flying splinters.
