Mr. Chas. Manger lost a horse about two weeks ago, killed on the wire fence. Last Sunday a horse belonging to a Mr. Brown, ran against the same fence and sustained injuries that will unfit him for use for a long time. It is a question whether barbed wire fence is a good investment for the farmers, after all.
This week we publish an essay written by Mrs. Knight, and read before the woman's suffrage meeting. We wish to say in this connection that we are willing to publish those essays at any time no matter who the author is, but we insist that they be written in a legible hand and on one side only of the paper. Had Mrs. Knight's essay been written on both sides of the paper it would have been rejected as promptly as was the one sent in a few weeks ago.
If a fire should start on Webster street the entire business part of this town would be consumed, nothing could be saved. All admit the danger and the probability of a fire at any time, and yet the people are too careless or indifferent to take the trouble to organize a fire brigade. An effort was made once or twice by a few of our business men, so that the people might have a fire engine in the town.

The following prayer is said to have been made at Concordia, Kansas, week ago Sunday:
"O Lord we humbly thank Thee for past favors, and beseech Thee to lend Thy kind assistance in leading Thy children through this world, which is beset with so many snares, pitfalls and temptations. Oh God, do send us an abundance of rain, so that we may have large and heavy ears of corn—not a—d little nibbles like we had last year. There is one more favor we beseech of Thee, O Lord. Do not allow the saloon men of Concordia to occupy a seat at thy right hand until they promise to throw off the extra ten cents they are now charging for a bottle of beer in these hard and dry times. Amen."

Last Saturday a party consisting of Joe Garber and wife, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Judge Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. Hawley and the editor of the CHIEF and "better half" went to Guide Rock to take supper with Mr. John Sabin, proprietor of the Guide Rock House. The evening was everything that could be desired for such an excursion, and the ride was enjoyed by all. The supper provided by "mine host" Sabin, was superb and was a credit to the culinary ability of his estimable wife, who superintended its preparation, and to which the guests did ample justice. After supper the guests adjourned to the parlor where with singing and instrumental music they whiled away an hour very pleasantly, and then bidding adieu to the host and hostess whose kind attentions had served to make the trip doubly enjoyable we drove home by the light of the "silvery moon," and while taking a vote of thanks to the Guide Rock friends who so royally entertained us, all agreed that a more pleasant evening we had not experienced in a long while.

The picture to the left shows how the excursionists looked when they started out in the morning. The one to the right is a pretty fair representation of their appearance upon their arrival at their respective homes the following morning.

A CARD.
I desire to extend my sincere thanks to the people who so promptly turned out to extinguish the fire in my residence on Wednesday last week, and also for a similar purpose on a former occasion. F. H. GORE.

EDUCATION.
It is a subject which interests us all. I have been an educator a good many years of my life, and if there is any one thing more than another, that is my "hobby," it is education, embracing the four elements, industrial, moral, religious and political. The education of children can hardly begin too soon. They should be taught obedience as soon as they know enough to disobey, and as soon as they commence to talk, they should be taught to speak correct. Many an educated man has had to regret in after life that he was not taught in his childhood to habitually use correct language. In the heat of debate or impromptu speech, the indications of his mother's tongue would unwittingly crop out. Yes; his mother's tongue literally, for the mother really forms the child's language. Then how careful ought we to be of our own speech, for we teach by example as well as by precept. I have learned by experience that it is not wise to send children to school until they are 6 or 7 years of age, and when they commence to go they should if possible go every day, so as to form habits of regularity of attendance. Their school life should be carefully looked after. No one is fitted for a teacher who uses ungrammatical language, provincialisms, or slang. Next to the parent the child looks to the teacher for an example, and that teacher should be, not only perfect in language and deportment, but if not a christian, should pursue at least a strictly moral character. The school board, and school superintendents also should be of the purest of morals, for not only do the children observe their ways, but the teachers also, and they should be enthusiastic in the course of education and the welfare of the teachers and pupils at heart.
According to the new school law, we women, can if we choose, hold the balance of power over schools now, and it is our duty to attend to it. I do not tell you that attending school meeting is a pleasure or anything desirable, judging from the way the men generally turn out to them. I have been told of a school meeting a few years ago in this town, when there were only 5 voters present, and I have lately heard of such a meeting consisting of 8 voters in a town of two thousand inhabitants. The business of education should not be conducted in any such slipshod manner. The law has given us the privilege and it is our duty to our children to take hold of it. We should not notice the ridicule of men, but should consider for ourselves, what is our duty. Some others have said, "It is the mother who molds the life of the children, and indelibly stamps her memory upon every thing pertaining to them." What vast responsibility then is a woman's, her education should go on from day to day as long as she lives.
She should inform herself not only of past but present history. She should know something of the government of the Nation, and especially of her own state. Webster defines politics as the "Science of government," and it is a science that we should study.
A celebrated man, in a speech at the woman's suffrage convention, says, "I believe politics and religion are twin sisters; they ought to go hand in hand, the one to perfect our life here, the other to prepare for the life to come." But perhaps some of you will say, "Of what use is this education in politics? All knowledge is useful, but we may be called to make use of this particular branch in the future." Gen. Estabrook says, "It is for man's interest as well as for woman's that this government shall not be a government only longer. Do men object to women voting because politics is a 'muddy pool'? Then surely there is something wrong with a male government which is so only because it is not good enough for the women of the land to partake in it."
It seems that sensible, practical, Bishop Whipple that eminent divine of the Episcopal Church, understands what we want of politics, for he says, "It is woman's peculiar province, through the suffrage to co-work with good men in mitigating the great evils under which society suffers so much in purse, happiness and life." But the women need to be educated on this subject as well as the men.
When the late President Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation a great many were against it, but he said, "They will be educated up to it before it takes effect." People learned that in those days, it was issued in September, and when it took effect the following January, the people had received a liberal education in regard to it, and made a settlement without further delay; I do not by this mean any particular person, I mean all who know these vexed indebted to me for some not so small that must be settled soon. Friends, I can't wait any longer; I have trusted you, when you were in need, now come right along and make some arrangement about your bill with me. I hope every one will call and see me or Messrs. Case & McNary.
