Money for a Rainy Day.

"For six years my daughter was sick from kidney and other disorders. We had used up our savings on doctors, when our dominie advised us to try Parkyr's Ginger Tonic. Wednesday night of last week, while Ira Munsell was returning home from Red Cloud he was stopped by a couple of highwaymen in the timber on the south side of the river. Not having money, and no life to spare, he whipped up his horses and escaped, under fire of the villians' revolvers, one bullet passing through his hat, but doing no other damage.

Mr. Daniel Snyder, a resident of the south side of the river came into town last week leading by an inch rope a little child that had been guilty of a petty theft, and whom the brave Snyder had valiantly captured and securely bound with the aforesaid inch rope. Mr. McNeny pursuaded Daniel, with language more forcible than polite, to unbind the boy, which he promptly did. The child was turned over to the sheriff and will probably go to the reform school.

A gentleman remarked in our hearing the other day, that, "If a man wanted to make an editor feel his displeasure, the best way was to go and stop taking his paper." No more positive proof that a man knows nothing about the newspaper business could possibly be adduced than the fact of his making such an assertion as the above. A man who thinks he can worry an editor by discontinuing his particular copy of the paper, places a far greater estimate upon the value of his patronage than the editor does. The puniest attempt at retaliation for real or fancied wrongs that a man can make is to stop his paper, and it brings a smile when it is done, for the loss of that subscription will not be noticed by the editor any more than a drop of water in the ocean. We know what we are talking about when we say that it would not cripple, nor even seriously effect the finances of any established country newspaper to lose a hundred, two hundred, or even three hundred subscribers in a single day. Country newspapers do not depend upon their subscription lists for support, they could get along about as well so far as finances are concerned, without any subscription list, and when individuals who say "stop my paper," thinking that they are striking a blow at the vitals of the concern, learn this fact they will cease making asses of themselves and incurring the ill-will of the editor, while not even approaching the accomplishment of their desire for revenge.

We acknowledge receipt of an invitation to the annual sheep shearing festival of the Southern Wool growers and sheep breeders Association held at Beatrice to-day.

We of course are expected to feel complimented by the invitation, that is what they are sent out for, and we do appreciate the compliment with all our heart, and hope the honorable members of sheep will excuse us for not grabing the occasion with our presence. We have had enough sheep shearing experience to last us our natural lifetime. We got the experience when we were a young man and when we had some confidence in secular concerns. That is what worked our butterfly amiable disposition and made us be young years a wanderer on the face of this earth. We always look with distrust and suspicion upon all sheepish things, and we can't help it. We met with a circumstance at a sheep shearing festival once that knocked all the romance out of our young and promising life and prematurely aged us. At that time we were a young man of perhaps as much promise and as enthusiastic over the subject of sheep as are those unsophisticated gentlemen who meet at Beatrice to-day to shear sheep—in their minds but we attempted to shear a sheep once, and we never smiled again. While after much persuasion and misrepresentations on the part of those present we escaped the shears and essayed to remove the fleece from a sheep that had been spread out on a bench for that purpose, we made a misstep and removed a piece of sheep skin the size of a man's hand from the unfortunate sheeps side and before we could get out of that the hitherto mild mannered sheep got up and knocked us over a five board fence into an adjoining field. This was the beginning of our troubles. We didn't shear any more sheep that day—nor since, but went with the rest of the young folks to the pond in the sheep pasture, and enjoyed ourselves in the delightful shade of the stately elms on its banks, and watched the geese and other feathered songsters gracefully swimming on its glassy surface. An old ram with lowering brow and forbidding aspect was seen to be making war like demonstrations in the back ground, but we were all too happy to pay much attention to him. Our "best girl" sat on a moss covered rock at the waters edge, and we, blissfully unconscious of impending evil, stood beside her, when, just as we were stooping over to whisper something in her ear, that malicious ram, disregarding the fact that it was the most momentous and sacred moment of our life, made a few terrific springs forward and caught us in the back, a few inches below the suspender buttons and we started on an exploring expedition across the pond. We stood not upon the order of our going, but went. We had not previously intended to cross the pond. In fact no such an idea had ever entered our head, but we crossed all the same. Gentle reader, did you ever suddenly start like a streak of greased lightning to do something that you had never thought of doing, and that, too, without knowing why you started? If you ever did then you can intelligently judge whether the expression of surprise and intense disgust that shone upon our classic countenance when we found ourself involuntarily crossing that pond just at a time that we particularly desired to remain on the other side, was feigned or not. That patty little speech of ours was nipped in the bud, and so was we. Sometimes we are led to think that "for what a slender thread hangs eternal things." Here were we a young man of much promise and unimpeachable character, being educated for the ministry, suddenly and without warning, in a most undignified and shameful manner, and in the presence of nearly fifty of our young associates, fired across a pond nearly a quarter of a mile wide, and that too so suddenly and unexpectedly that we could not have said good-bye if we had wanted to. The physical pain consequent upon the involuntary flight, especially the unusual mode of starting, was not so great as one might suppose, but the mental anguish was terrible. Is it any wonder, then, that we left the country without waiting to change clothes. Is it any wonder that we have sunk so low as to become the editor of a country newspaper and an associate of such moral lepers as the editor of the Argus.

TAKE NOTICE.

I have purchased the fractional ¼ sec. of land laying between Peter McNitt's and the river. And the public is hereby notified not to cut any timber on the same. M. B. MCNITT.

Last Monday we called at the office of Dr. E. A. Hall and took an inventory of his extremities. We found the doctor snugly ensconsed in Charley Potters building, occupying two of the pleasantest rooms on the upper floor which he has had freshly painted and papered and otherwise comfortably arranged. The Dr. has furnished his office and operating room with an eye to convenience and utility, and right here we would say that anyone wishing either through necessity or curiosity to be carved, hewn or sawed, could not find a more comfortable place to indulge in the subjects over a more deft and accommodating wielder of such cutting instruments than Dr. Hall.

After an extensive experience of living quite a number of years in the principal cities of Nebraska and surrounding states, the Dr. has decided to devote some time to operative surgery believing that the patronage afforded greater opportunity for advancement in the profession and to the betterment of mankind.

Having spent the past winter in New York City, the very leaders of medical instruction in the country visiting the prominent hospitals and colleges and for the purpose of super-imposing upon his operative surgery and surrounding unpractised methods of operating and the treatment of wounds and injuries, and not looking himself personally for fame in all the branches of the chosen profession, he brings home and will carry with him all the improvements for the prompt treatment of all surgical cases that may fall to his care. While in New York he supplied himself with an up to date, if not the finest and largest outfit of surgical instruments and appliances to be found in the State. Since his return his services have been appreciated by the rail road company cases having been sent in to him from beyond the Colorado state line. The people of Red Cloud and surrounding country may congratulate themselves upon the fact that in the person of Dr. Hall they will find not only a skillful and reliable physician and surgeon, but one in whom perfect confidence can be placed for the treatment of the most difficult surgical cases.

The Odd Fellows.

The following is the way L. E. Martin, of the Orleans Sentinel, who was among the visitors to Red Cloud Wednesday of last week, summed up the trip to Red Cloud and the treatment they received while here:

"There is not one person who accompanied the crowd but what will say they never enjoyed themselves any better—upon any day, nor were they ever any better taken care of. The train made the trip in a little over two hours, and were met at the depot at Red Cloud by the local and escorted up town. Dinner tickets were then distributed to the visitors, who immediately made use of them. The 'Red Home,' 'Holand House' and 'Valley House' are all to be complimented upon the tempting array of eatables set before the guests. It was a common remark, 'Well I never was fed so well in all my life.'

After dinner the procession was formed and some four hundred Odd Fellows got in line and marched to the church—where the exercises were to be held. The program, as heretofore published, was complied with. The address of welcome, by Rev. McKeighan, was appropriate and well delivered. The oration by Bro. Harris of Missouri Valley Junction, Iowa, was a rare treat to those who were so fortunate as to hear it. The orator has a peculiar style of quaint humor and wit about him, coupled with an excellent quality of common sense that strongly contrasts with the general run of public speakers—and which cannot fail to please a large majority of his hearers.

After the exercises at the church the procession again formed and marched back to the hall, where a few minutes were pleasantly spent in speeches for the good of the order, which concluded the exercises on the program. There was a dance in the evening, but as the train was to leave at 10 o'clock the visitors were prevented from dancing more than one set.

In conclusion, in behalf of the visitors from the valley, we desire to return the thanks of all for the hospitable and generous treatment received at the hands of the Red Cloud people, and especially of her Odd Fellows. Brothers and friends, if you ever come up this way our best wish is—that we will be able to do as well by you."

ORDINATION.—Council met with Union Church at the Catherton school house on the 29th ult., with a view of setting apart to the Gospel Ministry C. W. Springer. There were present Revs. W. R. Connely, J. H. Mize, J. E. Rockwood, J. T. Milner, Jos. Cheetham and Geo. O. Yeiser, also delegates from Red Cloud and Riverton Churches. The Christian experience and all being heard, and the examination as to doctrine, was truly satisfactory. The council adjourned until next day (Sabbath) at 11 a. m. when coming together Rev. J. H. Mize read from 1st and 2nd Chap. of 2nd Timothy and led in prayer.

Sermon by Rev. W. R. Connely from Mark 3d and 21st. Prayer by Rev. J. E. Rockwood laying on of hands by Ministers present. Charge and presentation of Bible by Rev. J. H. Mize. Charge to church by Rev. Jos. Cheetham. Hand of fellowship by Rev. Geo. O. Yeiser. Benediction by Rev. C. W. Springer. It was a pleasant gathering and the visiting Bros. and Sisters was hospitably entertained.
