New Years greeting for 1883. our lands Centenial year of jubilee FOR THE CHIEF BY M. S. L. S. R. All bail? our tands centenial year of jubilee,

Our songs of joy, our notes of praise we bring to thee. Of all the circling years, that down the stream of time have flown,

Make this, O God, the grandest, its glories all thine own. Our land of all lands. Thou's made the richest and the best.

Her vaults with coin, her bins with grain, are full and pressed. Her sons and daughters, crowd her courts, to write and sing. Mans richest products, of the mind to thee they bring. Her borders thou hast fringed with old oceans foam. Her rolling rivers, through her fer tile valleys roam.

The "Iron horse" neighs wildly, o'er all her mighty plains, While thriving commerce, queen, in all her cities reigns.

Her lowing herds, on waste fields, and fertile farms are found. Her bleating flocks, like flakes of snow lie o'er the ground.

A million spindles spin her cotton. and her wool. While untold mines of uncoined coin, lie rich and full.

Her schools and churches, of every style and sect. Vie with each other, learning and morals to protect. While doctors of mankind, and doctors of the law. Search every source, from whence newest thoughts to draw.

Her statesmen in her congress strive to legislate Measures, which shall the greates good to all create.

While her women, of her men, are a fair reflex. In laboring for better laws, to protect their sex.

Oh what joy should thrill each patriot heart to day, For influence good, our land hath power to sway. and that our seven Ls, by her may ner. But then the merchants not be missed. think they can stand it if the dinner Let our Lands Lays Live Long, and Labor fill the List.

Now please dont tease us any more, we'll swear-if need be-it is not so, for as things went, so now with us they go. We're not married, if we know anything about it, and if said "you soon will be,"we tell you now, we doubt is. But laying poetry aside, and coming down to solid, common prose, we admit we have been thinking some, ave, and talking some to several ladies perhaps a score or so. Well, we could'nt help it.
