And as I stood within my door, Still full of fears, and doubts, and cares. A clear, sweet voice behad me said: "I's just a-cre-ping up a'stairs!"
I turned and saw my little one. Quite happy in her brave intent, as step by step, with hands and feet, Up to the very top she went.

Just step by step, with hands and feetslowly, but still without a stop, Till with a crow of victory She sat down on the very top. And stretched out loving hands to me, Who clasped her to my fainting breast-The little engel who had brought The cheering words of strength and rest.

I said: "Now, fainting heart, be brave; see here the image of thy strife "Tis step by seep, with hands and feet, We climb the road of daily life Tis step by step all good we win, With toiling hands, upon our knees; I rwards and onwards, step by step; But at the top is rest and car

And ever after, day by day, I boldly faced my many cares; Telling my heart: "Another step; We're only or eping up the stairs? Thus fearing, toiling, hoping still, I did not turn. I did not stop, Till with a cry of victory I sat down on the very top.

But never in my brightest hour Have I forgot the weary day, The sat, almost despairing walk Home, in the evening still and gray The half-unspoken prayer I made
For help to hear my weight of cares;
The climbing child—the clear, sweet voice; "I's just a-creeping up a'stairs!"
