In order to stir up a little excitement in this city, the board of trade might try and get the Salvation Army to come here for a week. We could have lots of fun if nothing else.

Will Visscher, brother of our W. M. Visscher, of this city, will hereafter propound funny items for the Lincoln News. Mr. Visscher is one of the bright stars in the editorial firmament of Nebraska.

Don't Worry.

The Hastings Gazette-Journal seems to be terribly worked up over our prospect for railroads. The facts are that Hastings would be mighty well pleased if she could defeat any or all propositions that might be presented to Red Cloud by railroads other than those that might come to or from Hastings. The people of Red Cloud are fully able to take care of themselves and with the prospect of three or four more railways this summer it will stand Hastings in hand to look after her laurels of else Red Cloud may possibly strip her of them. She now holds over us in population, but with the in coming tide of immigration it is not impossible for us to catch up and on distance our northern suburb.

And Still Another.

This item is a little late but timely. It is to the effect that our friend Wolfinger is at least four inches taller than usual on account of a little girl baby that occurred at his residence the other day. Everybody smoke.

Most all the towns in the northwest which are now enjoying a boom are utilizing the space of their various newspapers as advertising mediums, and the result is quite perceptible. Business men could do their towns much good by this means, and at the same time be doing themselves individually a good thing. It is not always the best policy to put your money in some foreign advertising boom, but try a little of it on your home institution and see if the benefit is not greater.—Daily Pioneer.

Yesterday John Bentley saw three little children going along the street with bare feet, and to cheer up their little hearts he took them into a store and purchased each a pair of shoes. It was a kind act.—Red Cloud Chief.

We don't know what manner of man John Bentley is in other things but this we do know, that he showed by that act of kindness that sympathy for the misfortunes of others, that would make this world a paradise if more generally demonstrated. Red Cloud or any other town ought to feel proud of such an act by one of her citizens.—Salem Argus.

That's Nothing.

Mr. John C. Bonnell met a man with a broad mind and liberal heart, yesterday, at Red Cloud, in the person of A. L. Funk, superintendent of public instruction there. Mr. Bonnell explained the situation with reference to the Belt Line and asked if Mr. Funk would subscribe 20 of his 120 acres out near Clifton Heights.

"Certainly," said Mr. Funk, and his name was promptly added to the paper. It is men like Mr. Funk that make the world move.—Lincoln News "Coming through the rye" is very nice, yet some fellows find it more difficult to get over the rye than through it. Witness a case last evening where an individual took too much and behaved badly, under its baleful influence, which he would not have done in moments of sobriety.

Child Smothered to Death.

We are informed of a sad misfortune that overtook Mr. August Albright and his young wife, who were journeying by wagon from Stockton, Kansas to York, this state. Wednesday night of last week they camped about two miles northeast of town, sleeping in their wagon with their infant child. In the morning after they had eaten their breakfast and were preparing to start they discovered that their babe was dead—smothered by being covered to closely. The distracted parents sought the nearest house, which happened to be that of Mrs. Kincaid, where they found sympathetic hearts and willing hands to help them in their distress. Their little one was buried in the Guide Rock cemetery, and the following day the bereaved pair pursued their sad journey, accompanied by the sympathy of all who knew of their misfortune.—Signal.
