- For Representative, S. S. HANFORD.

It is noteworthy that every pivotal state has an exceptionally good local ticket to help the national ticket along. There's no use talking. That counts.

Our democratic friends find that much they would like to say against the republican party was said four years ago. It is hard to start a brilliant explosion with burnt powder.

The remarks of General Harrison to his Irish fellow-citizens have won him many additional friends and supporters among that race. They know he means what he says. General Harrison isn't any other sort of man.

Even trade is looking up and the crops, with few exceptions, are good. If heaven helps those who help themselves, so does it help a party that helps mankind. Fate and votes will certainly elect Harrison and Morton.

When General Harrison goes gunning he brings back game. His record of centre shots has given him the reputation of a fine marksman. Every time he levels his rifle a democratic falsehood or free trade fallacy is brought down.

General Harrison is certainly proving himself to be one of the most interesting and resourceful public speakers that the country has ever known. His addresses are models of vigor, dignity and good taste, and no man in the party is doing more to bring about that splendid triumph of republican principles which is now practically assured.

The democrats are dreadfully put out that Mr. Blaine refused to be "nominated" on his western tour. They wanted to say that Blaine, not Harrison, is the real candidate. And for that matter, the little circumstance that the statement isn't true don't much trouble them. They had made up their minds to say it, and say it they do.

Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, never spoke slightly of General Harrison. Nobody seriously supposed he did. The Camerons are not built that way. They are loyal party men, particularly when the party has such good men as Harrison and Morton. Senator Cameron says he entertains a very high opinion of the safe and conservative leadership of General Harrison, and says the latter does not gush. He is stable and sensible—like the Camerons, father and son.

Whatever may be the issue of the trouble between Hill and Cleveland, observes The Independent, "there is no question that a revolt of large dimensions from the democratic column of ticket and platform, is quietly proceeding throughout the state. There are thousands of voters who are going to reject both Cleveland and Hill and the policies they represent, and vote for candidates against whom no man can allege anything. Harrison and Morton and Miller are men of whom the country may be proud, and they represent policies which the pure and patriotic delight to approve."

Truly it was Home Market who was nominated by the republicans at Chicago. Here is the London Times saying, in a review of our last census—before it saw a prospect of getting English goods into our market duty-free—"It is a peculiarity of North American development and evidence of its solidity that town and country grow together. As the branches and roots of a healthy tree should stretch forth in unison, prosperous life in a newly planted American territory is certain to have its reflex in a thriving and neighboring market town. Town and country that grow great together means home market, which translated is Harrison and Morton."

HONESTY AFFINERS

HARRIS MORT PROTECTION IN NOVEMBER

Citizen Barnum, of Brooklyn, recognizes the great power for good of Gen. Harrison's addresses and he writes thus to the New York Tribune: "Permit me to suggest to you and through you to the campaign committee, that you publish General Harrison's speeches delivered to the thousands who have called upon him since he was nominated. Print them in leaflets so that they may reach the masses who do not see the Tribune. The opposition papers, while pretending to think lightly of them are very careful that their readers shall not see them. These speeches alone in the hands of every voter should convince a large majority that a man with such a head and heart will prove to be a second Lincoln, whom democrats lead to the skies, now that he is dead and gone. As I said to my brother, a democrat. That great-hearted, sympathizing, God-fearing man will carry everything before him in this campaign. This was on reading his first speeches in the Tribune. I am more convinced of it now than ever. How could anything be more touching than his speech to the Irish Club from Chicago, which the opposition papers did not publish?"

- The old settlers of Webster county are requested to assemble at the Red Cloud opera house, on the evening of November 13th, to which everybody is invited. The following are the representatives from each precinct:
- I. B. Hampton, Guide Rock.
 - A. Riley, Oak Creek.
 - Geo. Coon, Garfield.
 - C. C. Cox, Pleasant Hill.
 - L. D. Thomas, Elm Creek.
 - G. W. Hammell, Linc.
 - Joe Garber, Red Cloud.
 - J. R. Willcox, 2d Ward Red Cloud.
 - W. E. Jackson, 1st Ward Red Cloud.
 - S. B. Wells, Harmony.
 - Geo. P. Cather, Catherton.
 - Thos. Vaughn, Walnut Creek.
 - Chas. Teel, Stillwater.
 - W. E. Thors, Glenwood.
 - Moses Wilson, Potwin.
 - W. H. Fuller, Botis.
 - Wm. Norris, Hooper Creek.
 - G. A. Knight, Inavale.
- This is a laudible purpose and every old settler in the county should make an effort to be present. A strong organization should be formed and a history written up of every old settler in the county.
- Geo. W. HUNNELL, Pres.
Joe. GARBER, Sec.
