SAVED BY HER MOTHER. & Wealthy Matrimonial Adventurer Near

Marries His Own Daughter. "It happened about eighteen or twenty years ago right here in this city. A certain man, whose name you think of whenever you read about sewing-machines, because he was one of the first and most generally known inventors of that useful implement, paid very little attention to the laws of this New street man.

"Mover mind what his name was; you ought to know who I am talking about for his matrimonial vagaries attracted even more attention to him than did his valuable inventions in connection with the sewing-machine. When he died, in 1875, he left nine recognized widows, and no one knows how many children, for some of his "widows' did not make sufficient of a fight for a share of his estate-which, by the way, amounted to thirteen milllon dollars-to reveal their identity. Well, as I started to tell you, this old Cellow was the father of so many children by his half a score of 'wives' that he didn't know more than one in every ten of his offspring when he saw them. He had to be introduced to them.

In order the more successfully to humbug these deluded women to whom he sustained the relation of husband he gave a different name to each of them, and he used so many names that I guess he forgot some of them. He was always a great admirer of pretty girls, and would spend a small fortune to win the favor of any handsome female of whom he became enamored. One of the employes in the salesroom of his sewing machine company told him one day of an extremely pretty girl, who was playing in an amateur dramatic bociety over in Brooklyn. She was so pretty that all the young fellows were talking about her.

"Well, the old codger, he was about fifty-two years of age, found out when she was to make her next appearance, and secured front seats for the performance. He fell up to the top of his gray hair in love with the girl before the evening was over; and in a few days managed to secure an introduction to her. Then he offered her diamonds, dresses, a furnished house, horses and carriages, and, in fact, all those things which a rich person can procure, and almost all women yearn for, if she would marry him. Her meetings with the ancient swain were held in secret and without her mother's knowledge. She used an assumed name when she appeared on the amaor stage, although more than half the persons in the audience knew her by the name she was addressed by in the vicinity of her residence.

"The girl listened with both ears to what the old man said, and finally asked him to call at her home to receive his answer. He went there, sir, on the appointed evening. It was a cheaply-furnished and small house in a rather poor neighborhood. The old fellow hadn't been in the house five minutes before his former 'wife,' the girl's mother, came into the room where he was. They recognized each other, and then the old man had a mauvais quart d'heure, and no mistake He had not given his right name to the woman when he married her, and she did not know that he was the wealthy and widely-known inventor."

"What was the upshot of the affair?" "Well, the old man made a handsome yearly allowance to the mother, sent the girl to boarding-school, and when he died he left the daughter he wanted to marry a half a million dollars. Strange story, isn't it? But it's a true one, and lots of the old-timers who read it will remember the man. What's his name? Well, call him Hummer; that's close enough."-N. Y.
