PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

—Cardinal Mazzofanti, the linguist, who is said to have known a hundred languages, declared that he never forgot a word he had once learned.

—Mr. Chase, the Quaker Senator from Rhode Island, is credited with this remark: "The longer I am in public the more I am convinced that temper is the one thing which every man should have, should always keep, and never let his neighbor know that he has it."

—Isaiah V. Williamson, of Philadelphia, is reported to be the wealthiest bachelor in the United States. He has a fortune of twenty million dollars and gives away a large portion of it annually in charities. He is a plainly dressed old gentleman, very modest and retiring in his ways.

—Charles Primeau, the aged interpreter at the Standing Rock Agency in Dakota, was an early Indian trader among the Sioux in the Northwest. He had many perilous and exciting adventures, sometimes barely escaping with his life, and once had $100,000 of property destroyed in a twinkling by the savages.

—One of the brightest and most earnest of the students at the Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville was formerly what is known as a "street fakir." He finds that his experience in lauding the virtues of patent medicines before street crowds has been of great help in developing his oratorical powers for the pulpit.

—As a rule, donation parties are a terror and an ever-living apprehension to pastors, but a parson at Reno, Nev., find himself an exception. Fifty of his parishioners came to his house recently with provisions sufficient, almost, to tide him over next winter, and, in addition, they left behind them on a table a deep glass filled with gold and silver.

—Clara Morris, being convinced that no speaker hears his own voice exactly as others hear it, theorized that by speaking into a phonograph and then turning a crank she would have the correct idea of her declamations. Her experiments have not been exactly successful, as the repeated tones lack the volume of the original utterances, but there is said to be a precise mimicry of emphasis, inflection and tone.

—Mr. George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, has given another evidence of his generosity and artistic taste, and in this case a tribute of affection as well, in the gift of a memorial window of General Grant to St. Luke's Methodist Episcopal Church at Long Branch, the church that both attended while sojourning there. A life-size bust portrait of General Grant in uniform occupies the center of the window, supported on either side by a full-sized figure, one representing Mourning and the other Peace, while above floats a figure emblematic of Glory, surrounded by the historic sentence, "Let Us Have Peace." As the base of the window is the inscription: "General Ulysses S. Grant. Erected by his friend, George W. Childs, as a token of his affection."

"A LITTLE NONSENSE."

—Compassionate housewife—"So you were in the army, my poor man. What was your capacity there?" Tramp—"Double rations, mum."—Academy News.

—"Tommy," said his penurious uncle, how would you feel if I were to give you a nickel?" "I think," replied Tommy, "that I would feel a little faint at first."—Life.

—Mrs. Williams—"I am sorry to hear that your mother is ill, George. I hope she isn't sick abed." George—"Oh, no, Mrs. Williams. She is only sick aloung."—N. Y. Morning Journal.

—"Pa, what makes the little piggies eat so fast?" "Pa" was so confused and finally said that he would have to give it up. "Cause they want to be hogs," said four-year-old. —Toledo Blade.

—"Put me in the same room," says an old philosopher, "with a number of young girls, and I will tell you, when the postman knocks—merely by watching the looks of some, and the actions of others—how many of them are in love."

—Young Featherly (waiting for Miss Clara)—"And so your sister expected me to call this evening, did she, Bobby?" Bobby—"Yes, sir; I guess she did. I heard her tell ma that she had set the clock an hour ahead."

—Mamma—"Harry, what have you been doing to the poor dog? He's been howling dreadfully." Harry—"Well, he knocked over your vase and I spoke to him, and I guess his feelings were hurt." Mamma—"Nonsense! Dogs can't understand what you say."

—Harry—"Oh, yes, they can when you kick 'em."—Time.

—Officer—"Look 'r here, you! What are ye doin' round here this time o' mornin'?" Stranger (boldly)—"I'm headin' to me bizness! Wat yer

(with more under his coat, savagely)—"It came from a neg, or corse! What in blazes did yer think it come from? A body-fountain?"—Puck.

—Mrs. McSwyny—"O'm told your cholla fell out o' the top windy, Mrs. Clinchy." Mrs. Clinchy—"Yes, an' av me little men hadn't coom along just at the roit toime an' broke the fall wid the top av his head, me by'd be'd been killed." Mrs. McSwyny—"Did it hurt your hoo'sbund, now?" Mrs. Clinchy—"O! don't think so. It broke his neck, an' he doid without a groan."—Harper's Magazine.

TEETH WHILE YOU WAIT.

How the Dentist Tries to Defy Time as Well as Nature.

"Four and five dollars sets of teeth made while waiting."

That is a portion of an advertisement that caught a reporter's eye and caused a visit to the office of the dentist who had inserted it.

Many men doubtless remember that certain of their relatives remained in solitary confinement for from two to three weeks while waiting the arrival of the ideal set of grinders. Is it possible that one can have one's own worthless teeth removed, an impression of the mouth taken, and new teeth fitted, and all within an hour or two's time?

The dentist, when asked that question, answered affirmatively. "You see," said he, "dentistry is progressing like every thing else, and it is an every-day occurrence for me to get up a five dollar set of teeth in an hour and a half. Although it would be much better if, after having teeth extracted, the patient would wait a week until the mouth heals and the bone which surrounds the teeth be dissolved, still there are ever so many who come here and will endure the discomfort and pain which of necessity follows a quick operation rather than depart toothless.

How do I do it so quickly? Well, by a method of process I use in vulcanizing or 'cooking' the rubber used for the plate, which reduces that usually long process to an hour's time. "No, it is not so satisfactory, nor is it any less expensive, but it is quick. The price of a false set of teeth depends almost entirely on the number and size of the platinum pins which the teeth contain, and the quality and texture of the porcelain used.

"Then, too, the small manufacturers of cheap teeth are continually cutting one another's throats, and the people get the benefit. The dentist has very little to do in determining the price.

Countrymen and farmers buy more false teeth than do any other class of people. You see, Mrs. Jones, for instance, has the toothache, comes to town, and, after frantic attempts to get rid of the pain, has all her teeth pulled, and with a beautiful new set, with perhaps a little gold filled in front, returns to her village or farm. Mrs. Smith sees Mrs. Jones' teeth, and not content to be without any thing that Mrs. Jones has, she, too, comes to town and has porcelain substituted for bone.

"Country people don't take proper or even decent care of their teeth; and, besides, they eat too much pie. And they, too, are the people who want their teeth served up in an hour's time. A countryman comes to the city expecting to do shopping for 'the folks at home,' take in the town, and provide himself, and perhaps the family, with a set of teeth, and all in one day. Sometimes he is successful, too.

"Negroes carry a good deal of porcelain and gold in their mouths, too, but they almost invariably want the most expensive sets, insisting upon gold plates and plenty of gold filling. I have made a number of sets for negroes which cost one hundred dollars. But in a year's time a negro will manage to break the best set that I can make, and then, of course, he receives a bill for repairs.

"The gold plates are, of course, incomparably better than the rubber or the celluloid, and if a patient can afford them I always advise their use."—N. Y. Evening World.

NEED OF ARM-EXERCISE.

The Beneficent Effect on the Organism Through the Nervous System.

Walking on an even surface, the variety of physical exercise which most business and professional men get in town, is well known to be a poor substitute for arm-exercise. The reason is partially plain, since walking is almost automatic and involuntary. The walking mechanism is set in motion as we would turn an hour-glass, and requires little attention, much less volition and separate discharges of force from the brain surface with each muscular contraction, as is the case with the great majority of arm-movements.

The arm-user is a higher animal than the leg-user. Arm-movements are more nearly associated with mental action than leg-movements. A man's lower limbs merely carry his higher centers to his food or work. The latter must be executed with his arms and hands.

to an increased supply of richer, purer blood, or whether the continual discharge of motor impulses in some way stores up another variety of force, we do not know. One thing is certain, the victim of neurasthenia is very seldom an individual who daily uses his arms for muscular work; with this, the limit of harmful mental work is seldom reached.—Walter B. Pratt, M. D., in Popular Science Monthly.

A skilled Chinese woodworker, who arrived in New York sometime ago to take charge of the fancy work on a Chinese town hall being built, put on airs to the extent of saying that America cabinetmakers could not earn their tobacco money in China, as most of their work, while grand to the eye, was coarse in construction. Any skillful Chinese woodworker, he said, could make a bedstead that would be worth $10,000 in China, but it wouldn't pay to make such a one here, as it would take three years' time and no American would be willing to pay such a price for a bedstead except as a curiosity. In China, he said, bedsteads are valued as ornaments, as pianos are here.

Thanks Awfully.

I found on arriving in New York and Chicago to buy goods, that manufacturers and jobbers were more anxious to sell me goods than ever, giving me many bargains, which I shall give my customers the benefit of. Never in my business career have I been able to offer better bargains to my customers than at this time. As money is hard to get, it will please you to be able to buy so much for so little money. Very truly,
C. WIENER,
