The first inauguration of Washington marked the birth of our National Republic. Colonial and provincial America ceased to exist, and National America be an. The hope of success lay apparently in one man, been or ever will be, and upon the successfull issue of the trust to which he was here solemnly devoted. What scene in history overtops or even equals the grandeur and significance of that glorious consecration? As we look upon this sculptured form of the "Father of his Country," and remember that this is the place of the sublime event which may be commemorated by unborn generations, that here Washington took the oath of his great office, fancy pictures the scenes that occurred here one hundred years ago
