second Fourth of July speech by Ex. Gov. Peckham in Red Cloud.
 Cast your eyes over the broad expanse of country called the United States and behold the biggest thing in the way of enterprise yet on deck. What do you see? The greatest place in the world to spread. An early settler in Nebraska lived on her broad prairies for 20 years. The range of vision was so vast, and the prairie so immense that after he had been here five years his eyes stuck out like the glass of a bull's eye lantern, and before he died he had so stretched his eyes by looking that when he slept his mouth few open to furnish the skin to shut his eyes. Here, in this land lives and flourishes the biggest boasters and braggers of the world. An Englishman riding with an American in Kentucky, was boasting of the fleet footed horses in the old country, you know, when the American said "I'll show you a little trotting myself" whereupon he touched his rooster with his life and away he flew. Faster and still faster they went until the Englishman held to his seat with one hand and to his hat with the other. And still the speed increased. "What grave yards are we passing?" exclaimed the foreigner. "Graveyard," answered the American, "why, man, these are mile stones!" The same Englishman was at another time boasting of the large cannon made in England, when he was surprised to here the American tell of a cannon made in Philadelphia so large that the ball was pulled into it by a yoke of oxen. "How do they get the oxen out, then?" inquired the Englishman, supposing he had cornered the Yankee. "Drive 'em up through the touch-hole, of course," responded the champion of American big things. In this great country, which is the only one that has a genuine Fourth of July, we have the biggest crops of wheat and corn, of hogs and cattle, have the most gold, the most liars, the most marrying, the most school houses, churches and whisky in the wide, wide world.
 An American traveler sitting among a crowd of foreign travelers in a London hotel, listened to their marvelous tales of adventure and hair-breadth escapes until they had exhausted themselves with these yarns, when he began a tale as follows: "Well gentlemen, when I was crossing plains of the United States in '49 in a company of ten, we camped one evening by a small stream. We had noticed signs of Indians all day. It was my turn to watch that night. About midnight, when all were asleep I heard suspicious sounds, and turning saw the faces of Indians peering through the bushes. They gave one wild, unearthly yell and fell upon my sleeping companions. I rushed for the prairie, pursued by the remainder of the Indians, and just as I reached the open country one of them threw tomahawk and hit me squarely in the head killing me instantly!" He was thereupon acknowledged the champion liar, and so suffered the reputation of the country to be lowered. This country has the biggest and strongest stomach of any nation known to history.
 When the Goths and Huns overrun Rome, she went down unable to stand the storm.
 When the Saxons went over to Britain to help the Scots and Picts, Briton became Saxonized. When the descendants of Abraham went down into Egypt, they became so numerous old Pharaoh got scared and turned 'em loose. But we swallow more than a million every year coming from the stinking parts of Europe, and though we some times gag a little and get dizzy, still we are assimilating the vast mass right along.

 So the more I think of the greatness of our country in extent, in enterprise, in accomplished facts and in prospect, the more I am inclined to say "It's a big thing."
 Did you ever think that people talk about you as you do about them? The next time you stab a person by means of malicious words, remember you will be punished for your offence, and that you will be punished in the same disreputable way that you punished him for there are plenty of mean people to talk about each other. As you sow you shall reap.—Ex.
 Any man who harbors malice is liable to commit murder. A man who hates another a long time is sure to get into a fight with him sooner or later, and when the fight finally comes to pass their is likely to be mischief done. Men wait for years for the first blow, and the first blow is liable to be with a deadly instrument. Don't waste your energy in hating people; such a course will make you wretched, and finally get you into trouble.—Atchison Globe.
 A boy being requested to write a composition on a school marm, wrote the following: A school ma'am is a verb because she denotes action when you throw paper wads at the girls. Switch is a conjunction and is used to connect the verb ma'am to the noun boy. This is a compound sentence of which boy is the subject and switch the object. First person, plural number had case. A school ma'am wears her hair all banged on her forehead. She puts paint on her face and has some big feller to come and take her home. Ma says a school ma'am never gets to be older than eighteen until she gets married. It takes two school ma'ams all day to cook dinner.—Ex.
 "This thing of certain newspapers continually digging at a fellow after he has been elected or appointed to office aint right. When a man is a candidate for an office the newspapers have a right touch him up a little, but after he gets there they ought to let him alone and give him a chance for his white alley until he does something in his official capacity to be roasted for. When I first got into office they pitched into me pretty hard, but I went about and did my business on the square and paid no attention to these alleged newspapers, and they soon quit trying to bother me. The province of a newspaper is to print the news, and not to deal in personalities and dirty flings at a man's private character."—State Journal.
