AMERICA AS SHE IS.
 My country 'tis of thee,
 Sweet land of liberty,
 Of thee I sing.
 Land where the wheat's are tied,
 Land where industries died,
 And to the English side
 Two rapid wings.
 My native country thee,
 Land to which paupers flee,
 Thy name I love.
 I love thy Cleveland hills,
 Thy no-trade tariff bills,
 Thy Greshams, Smiths and Mills,
 Born from above.
 Let music swell the breeze,
 Democrat! to your knees,
 And swell the song.
 Let those who brought this fate,
 Their medicine take straight,
 And three years longer wait
 To fight the wrong.
 Our Father, Grover C.,
 Mogul of Misery!
 To those we sing,
 Be it with us if you can,
 But, if not, like a man,
 Say you don't care a d—
 For anything.

A FEW TRENTHS.
 E. M. DASH.
 And now that spring is drawing nigh,
 We soon will see the pesky fly;
 He'll be in the sweat and in the pligh—
 We dread to think of it. O dear, O migh.
 We know that when the spring does come
 We'll see the girls all chewing gum,
 While on the corner the blooming boys
 Will sit around and suck his thumb.
 And when the winter weather is o'er
 And things have brightened up once moer,
 The merchant gets fresh stock in store;
 Has spring goods piled from ceiling to floor
 "An' at is what I want," he sighs,
 "I'll cause my trade to sniffly sighs,
 For the people always patronize
 The stores that liberally advertise."
 And you'll find it just that way, my friend,
 Wherever your weary way you wind,
 For printers' ink is sure to lend
 A helping hand unto the lend.
 Things are looking blue to-day,
 But they'll be green to-morrow;
 If you haven't got a green neck tie
 You ought to go and borrow;
 For it is just this way you see—
 We thought we'd give you warning—
 That if it doesn't storm 'twill be
 St. Patrick's day in the morning.

A clock can depend on its hands; they never strike.
 There is one thing a thief won't take—time to work.
 The pen is mightier than the pig, because it ho-ds them.
 "You're too fresh," said the man as he salted the oyster.
 The trees make very graceful bows, even if they are a little green at it.

WEATHER FORECASTS
 Furnished Expressly for The Chief for Webster County
 (Copyrighted by W. T. Foster.)
 St. JOSEPH, Mo, March 16.—My last bulletin gave forecasts of the storm waves to cross the continent from March 18th to 23d and the next will reach the Pacific coast about the 23d, cross the western mountains by close of March 24th, the great central valleys from 25th to 27th, and the eastern states about the 30th.
 This disturbance will be of more than usual force and will cause heavy rains in some parts of the country. The warm wave will cross the western mountains about the 23d, the great central valleys about the 25th and the eastern states about the 27th. The cool wave will cross the western mountains about the 26th, the great central valleys about the 28th and the eastern states about the 30th.
 LONG RANGE FORECASTS,
 A perfect system of long range weather forecasts is much to be desired and eventually will be reached. There is not another attainable object that will so greatly add to the general comfort and welfare of the human race. To know with certainty the future rainfall, temperature and dangerous storms of flood and wind would revolutionize all the industries of the world and abolish half its miseries. We are certainly progressing toward these grand and ever to be desired results. Probably the greatest success yet attained in these weather bulletins is in the forecasts of warm waves and cool waves. Hundreds of letters from manufacturers, merchants, shippers, farmers, etc, in all parts of the United States, attest the great advantage to them in the information contained in these bulletins as to the changes from cool to warm and warm to cool, and all will testify that 90 per cent of the forecasts in reference to these changes are verified. The most severe storm, cold wave and blizzard, of the past winter were foretold in my bulletin of January 27th, in which the location and general details were given more than two weeks in advance.

Another feature of very great importance is to know when the cold and warm winters will come. This has been a deep puzzle, a great hidden secret of nature, apparently past finding out. In this the long range forecasts have met with some reverses but recent discoveries explain the past of cold and warm winters and greater accuracy may be expected in the future.
 Rainfall is the greatest puzzle, its causes are not all known and it will be the last to yield up the secret. Some important discoveries as to precipitation have certainly been made. There are tides in our atmosphere which cause the atmosphere to sometimes ascend to higher elevations than at others.

Forty years ago the country lying within forty miles east of the Rocky mountains and extending from the British possessions on the north to the Gulf of Mexico was a desert, just as the geographers called it. From that time to 1890, with various fluctuations, the rainfall gradually increased, because the depth—not the weight of the earth's atmosphere was increasing and the moisture was gradually floated to higher and higher elevations. The cause of this is known and such changes may be foretold with a considerable degree of accuracy.
 By calculating from similar causes we may know when to expect general excess of rain in the great valleys and on that side of the great mountain ranges adjacent to the oceans. But when it comes down to details for limited locations we have not advanced far enough to avoid occasional errors.

At the present time there is no hope of any assistance from the general government in developing long range forecasts and the system must be worked by our private enterprise, aided by the public press. The weather bureau at Washington through its professor of meteorology, F. H. Bigelow, has laid down a basis for long range forecasts, but upon that basis it has not the courage to make single long range forecast.

Indications are that the government weather bureau will be merely a recorder of weather events and thus furnishing useful information to those who study the causes of weather changes, that the causes of weather changes will be studied out and the valuable forecasts made by private enterprise and furnished to the public through enterprising periodicals that are able to pay the individual for his work. Far-ried officials seldom make discoveries or inventions. There is no incentive for them to reach out beyond mere routine work.

Prof. Fals of Vienna, Russia, is successfully forecasting earthquakes. The basis of his calculation is exactly the same as one of the causes of important weather changes. His calculations are based on the position of the moon relative to the earth and my successful forecast of the great February blizzard was based on the same cause.
 There are many minds at work on these problems and we are nearer their solution than the public has ever thought possible.

 JULIA S. BOWEN,
 Department Secretary.

The following is a letter from Mark Warner who is successfully engaged in business in Ten Sleep, Wyoming. The letter was written to his brother J. C. Warner, of this place and kindly handed us for publication.
TEN SLEEP, WYO.
 DEAR BROTHER— I received your letter some days since but was just starting on a hunt so did not stop to reply. Three of us went after elk but the snow was so deep that we gave it up and came back we killed 8 deer, I killed 1 out of a bunch of 5 and wounded the 5th one I shot them all across a canyon over 300 yards, one I shot at over 300 yards and hit him every time, had to shoot the 2d time to kill him. We hunt mostly on horseback. I can't send you venison as it is against the law and the settlers are on the watch, the railroad has no right to carry it but the worst difficulty is we are 165 miles from the railroad, at Casper. I can't get to the B. & M. before next May on account of the snow on the mountains. It has been warm a week back the snow is going fast. The mail goes from here to Casper but it would cost more to get a box of meat there twice over than it would from Casper to Red Cloud. I wish I could send you some I have hanging in a little building that was formerly used as a blacksmith shop I am thinking of taking up a piece of land near here under the desert act. Send me a Red Cloud paper once in awhile. Wish you could all come next summer and go up to the Ten Sleep lakes with us.
 Yours truly,
MARK WARNER.
