CRANDALL'S MARCH.

Tom Crandall, the orderly sergeant of Company I, was a fine soldier and a fine fellow as well, but he was something of line!" and through all the evolutions. a martinet-hardly popular among the members of his own company.

When orders were issued to have the men thoroughly drilled, Orderly Tom obeyed most literally. From reveille to tattoo it was drill, drill, drill for the boys of Company I till they would have welcomed marching orders for the north pole as a release from the manual of arms and evolutions.

Nothing less than a surgeon's order would serve with Orderly Tom as an excuse from drill.

One afternoon, when the company had fallen in, the roll call revealed the absence of Thomas Higgins and William Stapleton. A rigid examination of the company quarters failed to discover the delinquents, and with "absent without against them in the orderly book and a big black mark in Tom's memory the company marched to the drill ground without them.

The quarters of the men were the stables of Sneidiker's hotel. With 10 full companies to drill, the stable yard, which was the only parade ground within the regimental lines, was totally inadequate; hence all drills in company movements were conducted in a field outside the guard lines.

Sentinels were duly instructed to permit all squads or companies in charge of noncommissioned officers to pass out, but under no other circumstances to allow an enlisted man to leave the camp without a pass, though all soldiers might enter unquestioned.

Tom marched his company about a just changed direction by the right flank skulkers stealthily emerging from the Youth's Companion. quarters of Company H.
"Company, halt!" instantly shouted

Tom. "You, Higgins and Stapleton, get your equipments and fall in for drill! ater enjoying to the top of their bent Do you hear?" vidently they did hear, but instead of obeying both started on the double quick toward the cookhouse. "In place, rest!" shouted Tom to his company. "Halt, there!" to the skulk-ers. But they quickened their pace. Dropping his rifle into the hands of a corporal, Tom started in pursuit. Across the guard lines he sped to the cookhouse, into which the two fugitives had disappeared, and into which he also quickly vanished. Now, a large portion of the members of Company I were young fellows, ranging from 17 to 23 years of age, little used to military restraints, while the deprivations and dullness which they were experiencing made them peculiarly eager for some sort of fun. It can be easily conceived that Orderly Tom's unexpected deviation from irksome drill was hailed by the boys of the waiting company with delight. They hoped the race woud last long, and that the fugitives would escape.

So they did. After an absence of some 10 minutes Tom reissued from the cookhouse alone, and with an ominous frown upon his brow approached his command. At the same time the two fugitives were seen far down the road, making their way rapidly toward the town. having left the cookhouse by some way of which Tom knew not.

The almost simultaneous appearance of the defeated orderly and the victorious skulkers was greeted by the boys of the company with first a shout of jeering laughter and then a ringing cheer.
"Attention, company!" shouted the orderly sergeant. But the only attention paid him was another shout of laughter that deepened his frown.

"Stop that laughing in the ranks!" again commanded the orderly.

"Halt!" cried the sentinel, bringing his piece to a charge and confronting Orderly Tom, who had now reached the guard line. "You can't pass here."

"I cannot pass!" gasped the aston-ished orderly. "Why not?" "Orders," curtly replied the sentry. "Orders! Well, what are your orders?

"Oh, you know the orders well enough," answered the sentry-"to let no enlisted man pass out of the camp without a pass except noncommissioned officers in charge of squads for drills." "Well," exclaimed Tom triumphantly, "I am a noncommissioned officer in command of a company out for drill, and there is my company, as you well "Don't know nothin about that company. It's outside the lines, and you're inside. Don't look much like a company anyhow." Indeed the sentinel's sareastic allusion to the company was justified, as the men danced and roared and fairly hugged one another to see the difficulty into which their stern sergeant had fallen. He made no further attempt to cross the lines, but turned and strode swiftly toward headquarters, followed by a fresh burst of derisive laughter from his insubordinate command.

In a short time he reappeared, and exhibiting a pass to the sentinel advanced toward his demoralized compary, and resuming his rifle uttered the single word, "Attention!"

Every face instantly sobered, for every man felt that not only was Tom deeply offended, but that retribution was close at hand. Very quietly he gave the order: "By the right flank! Right face, company! Forward, march! and retribution began.

It was December. Snow had fallen some days before, then rain, followed by a day or two of unseasonably warm weather. The country roads, tramped by troops of drilling cavalry and plowed by teams and loaded wagons, were all slush, water and very tenacious, deep

Straight to this abominable highway Tom marched Company I. Directly into the middle of the road, where the mud was thickest and the water deepest, the boys wheeled in obedience to his stern command. Then, as unconcernedly as though on the most perfect parade ground in the world, he issued his or-

"By company, into platoons! Left in-to line, wheel! On right, by file into

At one moment Company I charged bayonets down that fearful road at double quick, at another wheeled in circle through slush, while Tom noted defects and corrected them as nonchalantly as though on a grassy lawn.

For a full hour and a half, long after recall had sounded, without halt or rest, Tom maneuvered that weary company. At last, wet, weary and half exhausted, the mud bedraggled company was led to quarters by its inexorable com-mander. Throughout that remarkable drill the only words Tom uttered that indicated the state of his feelings were spoken as he gave the command of dismissal. "Company, right face!" he ordered. 'Arms aport! When you fellows would like to defy discipline again, let me

And so ended the proceeding, which was known as "Tom Crandall's march" as long as Company I was an organiza-

In the days which followed the boys of Company I came to know their orderly sergeant better and learned to respect and appreciate his military qualities, for if his literal interpretation of orders sometimes tended to their inconvenience it oftener led to their comi et and well being, and in more insta-ces than one to the preservation of some of their lives.

Poor Tom sleeps today in the silent camping ground, and many of his old companions are with him, but with each returning spring the floral emblems of his surviving comrades are laid upon hundred feet from the lines and had his grave as tenderly as though that grotesque march, of which he was the hero, when his quick eye detected the two had never been. -George H. The prisoner before the wild and woolly western court hadn't much of a chance and no friends, but a young lawyer from the east, out there to win his spurs, undertook the case for the glory there might be in it, and the first thing he did was to demand a jury trial. "Aw, come off," remonstrated the Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children." Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing oplum, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves. Da. J. F. KINCHELOR,

Castoria. " Castoria is so well adapted to children that

I recommend it as superior to any prescription H. A. Ancuen, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
