PASCHAL WEDDED.

Well Known Citizen of Creston Takes unto Himself a Wife.

Last evening at 8 o'clock a very quiet little wedding occurred at the home of Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Stryker, on south hill, when Mr. James W. Paschal and Miss Lida Hale plighted their troth at the marriage altar. Rev. Mr. Stryker, who is an old friend of the contracting parties, tied the nuptial knot which was witnessed by only a few intimate friends. After the words were spoken making Mr. Paschal and his bride man and wife, they repaired to a cozy home on South Vine street, which had been prepared by the groom for his bride, where they will reside.

James was rather shy in making his marriage arrangements and only a few of his intimate friends were aware of the fact that he contemplated matrimony until yesterday when the secret leaked out and the event was the subject of general comment about the court house, where reporters and officials anxiously awaited the coming of the groom for the legal document giving him permission to wed, but he did not appear at the clerk's office until six o'clock. Although friends of Mr. and Mrs. Paschal were somewhat surprised, yet the marriage is looked upon with satisfaction and pleasure.

Mr. Paschal is well known and highly respected in Union county and numbers his friends by the score. He has resided here many years and owns a fine farm just east of the city. He has at all times been looked upon as one of our best citizens and has always taken an active part in public enterprises. He is possessed of a nice amount of this world's goods and is situated so that he can enjoy life. His bride is quite well known in Creston having resided here about two years. She has known Mr. Paschal since childhood and is well acquainted with his life's history. She is highly spoken of by those who know her as a lady of culture and refinement. The Gazette extends congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Paschal and trusts their married life may be pleasant and happy.—Creston Gazette.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had had colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug-store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by Deyo & Grice Druggists.

WAR SCENES.

The Days of '01 to '04 as Observed by An Eye Witness.

Ed BRACON:—Pencil in hand (ink is played out) I shall endeavor to drop you a few more strings in regard to the "ups and downs" of Co. A. I presume you are already aware of our proceedings up to the time of our departure from Commerce as "R. W. S." wrote you from that point. We left Commerce en route for New Madrid Feb. 28, marched about twenty miles and camped for the night on a farm belonging to Col. Hunter of the Rebel army; heard that Jeff Thompson had been there the same day for the purpose of planting cannon so as to command the road (for about a half mile) which led across a slough, but our force being much stronger than he anticipated, he left on "double quick" forgetting to eat his dinner, which our advance guard found steaming hot on the table, of course they didn't eat it—soldiers don't like warm meals on a march. The next morning we resumed our march and after traveling five or six miles we heard a volley or two of musketry and the booming sound of several pieces of artillery. Our Colonel gave the command to gallop march, and away went the "bloody seventh" helter skelter, nip and tuck, in the direction from whence the sound proceeded; after going it strong for four or five miles we overtook some infantry and ascertained that while Jeff was planting his cannon in a lane for the purpose of sweeping Noleman's Cavalry which had been pursuing him all night (but of which we knew nothing) a company of Infantry that had been guarding the railroad near Saxton pitched into the old swamp Fox and his ragamuffin squad sending him and his artillery (after he had fired a few rounds) on quick time towards New Madrid. As soon as our Colonel had ascertained the above facts he detached our company to make a flank movement on Jeff's left, Company D. on the right and Company H. to follow on the road. It would have made a mule laugh to see the strife between some of our boys and some of company H's to see which could overtake old Jeff and get killed first; but as Company H had the road they had the advantage of us and after pursuing him about eight miles succeeded in capturing his artillery consisting of three rifled breech loading cannon, one brass and two steel pieces; killed one man and captured a captain, a lieutenant a quartermaster and several privates; but old Jeff, as usual had his running rig on and escaped. The next day after the chase our regiment proceeded in advance of the main army and made a reconnaissance of Madrid. Part of the regiment advanced within a mile of town. The enemy threw a few rotten shells at us from their gunboats killing one horse, no other damage done. We returned back to the main army and encamped for the night. The next morning the whole entire force proceeded towards Madrid. Three regiments of infantry were deployed as skirmishers with our cavalry to support them. We advanced to within a half mile of one of their forts, (of which they have three) when we were discovered by them and immediately their gunboats commenced tossing shells at us; at first they threw their shells entirely too high, which considerably amused some of our boys; among the rest Corporal No. 3 appeared to be particularly delighted with the fun. "Go it old fellow," says he, as a shell passed screaming and hissing high up in the air. "Boys," says he, "how do you like the sound of them fellows; let's go down and take the town, they can't hit us." Pretty soon along came a sixty-four pounder and burst about one hundred yards ahead of us. The Corporal's eyes began to protrude considerably. "Corporal," says Pete, "let's go down and take the town."

"Oh! held on, lets wait awhile, there is no use of being in a hurry." He had scarcely spoken when a shell passed just over our heads, striking the ground immediately in our rear. Corporal could stand it no longer, but rushing up to our Lieutenant, exclaimed, "Lieutenant let us be getting away from here. I believe I can see just as well a little further off."

"But how about the town, Corporal?"

"Oh! let the town go to the Devil or Memphis, I don't care which; it is no account after we do take it, besides some of us may get hurt for they throw them shells a d—d sight straighter than I thought they could."

After obtaining all the information we could in regard to the position of the enemy's defenses, our forces were drawn off some three miles from town where we pitched tents and where we will remain. From the best information I can gain, it is the intention of the General commanding here to await the arrival of our gunboats from Cairo (which we expect daily) so they can engage the enemy's boats while we take the town, which we will do or collapse.

'Tis but a short time since I wrote you last, yet many and sad have been the changes in Company A. The death of Minear and Denham was quickly followed by Fox and Craig being taken by the enemy. On our march down here Sergeant H. M. Wilson was captured by some of Jeff Thompson's men and is probably now in Memphis; and last night we performed the painful duty of burying Eli Thayer. He was taken on the 2nd with a conjestive chill and lingered till yesterday when death put an end to his sufferings. All was done for him that possibly could be done by men placed in our present circumstances but to no avail, his spirit has winged its flight to the God who gave it.

Death, even when surrounded by relatives and all the heart holds dear is sad and mournful, how much more so must it be when no kindred are nigh? Here was no kind sister's hand to smooth the pillow on which rested his weary head; no fond mother to bathe his aching brow; no indulgent father to bid farewell; no brother to receive and execute his last dying requests and follow him to his last resting place. The cold March wind sighed mournfully through the leafless branches of a wide spreading apple tree as his brother soldiers lowered him into the grave.

The tear of sympathy coursed its way down many a rough and weather-beaten cheek as our old Chaplain earnestly prayed for the welfare of the soul that had fled. As a friend he was firm and true; no better soldier ever lost his life in his country's service; he always did his duty willingly and uncomplainingly. His untimely fate has cast a gloom over company A. that time can never dispel. But he is gone from our midst; "let him rest." When next I write it will be from the inside of the fortifications at Madrid or I am a goner.

Yours full of fight,
RAMBLING JAKE.
