The importance of the subjects doubt i is is ample excuse for the unusual congin of President McKinley's annual message to congress, the greater portion of which is about the war, the vents leading up to it, connected with and following it, up to the acceptance of our terms of peace. The general use of the message is highly commended; also the handling of the more or as delicate question connected with ur acquirement of the Philippines. It free from rancor and bombast, alrough fully recognizing the unpresidented achievement of the country in the war with Spain. Its dominant note is patriotism of the highest order, atriotism such as every good Ameringth of President McKinley's annual note is patriolism of the highest order, attriotism such as every good America u feels, regardless of political affiliation, and can endorse. If the sentiment ir congress is representative of that of the country, and it usually is, as message will be generally commended.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

While the legislation of the session of congress which opened today will have attacked direct connection with the newly acquired territory of the country, several of the regular appropriation bills notably those for the army and those for the navy, as well as the bills for the increase of the regular army, will furish texts for many speeches on that ubject, and the talk of senators and representatives indicates an intention to take full advantage of those texts. Consequently the debates of the present session are expected to be unusually lively and interesting.

There is a disposition among promiment republican senators to tight shy of committing themselves either for or against holding an early spring session of congress, to consider financial legislation, regardless of whether failure of the present session to pass all the legislation actually necessary makes an extra session imperative. Senator Allison was asked plainly whether he was in favor of an extra session to consider financial legislation, but he adroitly declined to commit himself and answered the question by saying:
"The president must decide whether or not the new congress shall speedily assemble; we have nothing to do with assemble; we have nothing to do with the question." He was also averse to expressing an opinion, saying when asked to do so: "So many things may happen in the next three months that a prediction at this time regarding an e tra session must be necessarily based upon the merest speculation."

Secretary Alger says, in his annual report, in favor of his recommendation that it be provided in the legislation for increasing the regular army to 100,000 men, that natives of islands occupied by our troops may be enlisted: "These men are acclimated, understand the language and habits of their countrymen, and their enlistment will not only give them employment, but also have men, and their enlistment will not only give them employment, but also have the tendency to enable the government to get into closer touch with their people than it would otherwise be able to do. This would also relieve our own men from serving in those climates to a large extent, and would, moreover, enable the volunteers to be mustered out of the service and return to the vocations of civil life." The last sentence will do more to hurry army legislation than any other one thing. Every senator and representative is besieged with requests to get this or that regiment of volunteers mustered out, and they all know that so considerable number of the volunteers will be ordered mustered out until congress provides for the enlistment of regulars to take their places. It is believed that this peculiar situation will keep plus quiet who otherwise would bitterk that one the bill providing for the take that in the regular army.

But it has not been for gotten that Mr. Hale drew some very welrd pictures of what would happen to this country if it dared to make pen to this country if it dared to make war on Spain, which were a long ways from what actually did happen; therefore this doleful talk isn't fetching any teurs of alarm.

The probability of Nicaraugua canal legislatien is going to be a good thing for Washington hotel keepers this winter, and it may be that some impecunious statesmen who will be dropped from Uncle Sam's pay roll at the close of the present congress, will also handle some of the Panama canal company's money which it is understood handle some of the Panama canal company's money, which it is understood will be liberally spent to block Nicaraugua canal legislation. The house is
