MORE OR LESS PERSONAL. Once again our city has the water question to deal with. Every year, at least once and sometimes oftener, it is found necessary to turn the creek into the wells in order to supply a sufficient amount of water for both lawn and drinking purposes, and especially is this noticeable the latter part of July and the month of August when the creek water is the most unfit for use. This is something the city has had to contend with almost every year, and the quicker something is done to secure a sufficient supply of pure water for our citizen's use the better. This week J. F. Webber of Oxford was in the city figuring with an object of inducing the city to bore a well to the depth of four hundred feet, or until a supply of water sufficient for use was struck. His price was one dollar per foot or four hundred dollars providing water could not be struck short of four hundred feet and if struck short of that he is to have one dollar per foot for each foot in depth and the city to pay expense of shipping his tools one way. He expressed the opinion that plenty of water could be secured as soon as the well was once through the ledge of rock which underlays this country, which opinion was based upon his experience with other wells he has put down in Nebraska. Now, while $400 may seem quite a sum of money for our city to expend in trying to get a supply of water at present, it is a sum that looks very insignificant when the health and fire protection of our city is at stake. It is something that must be done sooner or later and why not do it at once. If the city has not enough money to carry the project through, we venture to say enough could be raised by subscription to pay one-half the expense. We say, and we believe the majority of our citizens will concur with us, if there is enough money in the city treasury to sink a well four hundred feet, under a guarantee of plenty of water, sink it at once and let the water question be forever settled. If there is not enough money to do it raise what can be had by subscription and let the city pay the balance, which it could surely do. One thing is certain, the present supply of water will never be sufficient. A delegation of ladies representing the W. C. T. U. of this city waited on the city council last evening with the object in view of having a curfew ordinance passed which would keep young boys and girls off the streets nights. The council seem to be of the opinion that while a curfew law would be all right were there a policeman on each block or two to enforce it, but in a city like Red Cloud where enough money cannot be had to pay a city marshal a decent salary, and he must be compelled to depend upon business men to contribute and do the work of night watch and police at the same time in order to make a living, it looks as though a curfew ordinance would be somewhat of a burden to that officer. The business men contribute the larger portion of the salary of the night watch for the benefit of having their places of business watched at night and might enter strenuous objections to paying a night watch who would be kid-hunting in some other part of the town and letting some one rob their stores. Under present conditions a curfew law would be ineffective with the exception of a few small boys who might be intimidated by it, and until the city is able to pay a policeman for this special duty such a thing would be detrimental to the business houses. During the rain storm of last Friday night the residence of James Keagle, living south of the river was struck by lightning. The bolt entered the stove pipe which goes through the roof of the kitchen and descending tore out the rear portion of the stove and then entered the floor bulging up the boards and tearing the nails out. Mrs. Keagle was standing near the stove holding the tea kettle in her hand and the bottom was blown out of the vessel and the contents ran out but fortunately did not ignite. A small amount of hay which was near the stove was burned but fortunately went out without setting fire to the building. The ones who were shocked gained consciousness shortly and will experience no bad results from their close call.
