Gen. Wilson's Report on Year's Operations and Armament of the Capital City.

Gen. Wilson, chief of engineers, has made a report of the operations for the defense of Washington. These works are in charge of Licut. Col. Charles J.

Allen and Lieut. Jay J. Morrow, his assistant. In regard to the defenses, Gen. Wilson says: "The defenses of Washington are located at three sites-two on the left bank and one on the right bank of the Potomac river. One of the sites on the in Cuba is a circumstance that few left bank is in charge of an ordnance sergeant; the other two were garri-

One ten-inch B. L. rifle, intended for tests of experimental parapet, had also been mounted temporarily for defense during the war with Spain, with funds fense.' This gun was subsequently mounted on the platform built for testing experimental parapet. In addition to the foregoing, construction was in progress upon two emplacements for ten-inch guns on disappearing carriages and for two four-inch rapid-fire guns, under allotments from the appropriation for 'national defense.' These batteries were entirely completed during the year. "Construction was commenced dur hungry and let poor Tom have all of it if he could have eaten it, but his hunger Generally Improvised with Steel was growing less all the time, and he wallowed mighty little of the stuff. "That night while it was my turn to hold his head on my lap he asked me in a whisper that wasn't as strong as a sick woman would have said it to put my car close to him, and I did, and he said to me:

" 'Bury me here, and then you can esape. Some day, when it's safe, you can tell my friends. Don't wake the boys.' "And before I could even say good-by to him he was deader than a mackerel. I don't remember in all my life that I ever saw a man die before. I've seen most everything but that. And I acually held Tom's head after he was dead for a long time, but I can't tell how ong. But I see the daylight breaking brough the brush before I called the other boys to wake up.

"Men in our situations had no time to pass any resolutions or make any speeches, and men like us ain't up in uch things nohow, but we said a few words about his bein gritty, and then we buttoned his coat and turned up the collar. Two of us dug out a place with our hands, and then we all laid his body in it, and we wrote his name on a bit of paper we had and put it in his pocket. Then we covered the body with leaves and throwed on the dirt, and then covered up that with more leaves and branches. One of the gang said he remembered something he learnt at Sunday school and said it over Tom, whatever it was, and then each man struck out for himself.

"Could I find the place where we buried him? You bet, in the dark. A man ain't likely to forget such a thing in all of his life.'

"The sheriff of Waukegan told me," said the officer in Brooklyn, "that he never heard such a story as the prisoner told him, and that it beat anything he ever saw in a theater. And that the toughest job he ever had was to take his man back to jail."-Brooklyn Eagle.

Unsolved Mystery of the Maine. "I do not believe the details of the blowing.up of the Maine will ever be revealed, and no man ever worked harder to probe the mystery than I." remarked Capt. Lucien Young, of the navy, recently. "It is as much of a mystery to-day as it was when the atrocious crime was committed, for there cannot be the slightest doubt that its lestruction was the result of design. The explosive that did the work was taken from the magazine by a couple of Spaniards, who undoubtedly acted under orders, and these men are not alive to-day. Dead men tell no tales, and after they had been used in the accomplishment of the barbarous deed there was every reason to get them out of the way. The exact way in which the explosive was used, however, is a secret that will never become known, unless those who know about it choose Plates or Sandbags for the Protection of Troops.

Many dispatches from the Transvaal refer to the armored trains which are used to transport troops and passengers through the district in which military operations are going on, and inquiry naturally arises as to what constitutes a train of that kind.

It is nothing more than a train of ordinary freight cars which have been strengthened on the inside with sheets of metal and pierced with holes through which rifles and small field pieces may be used on an attacking party. A flat car or gondola, with a heavy piece cu two of artillery, may be a part of such a train, and in some instances enough of the closed cars may be taken away to allow a maxim gun to be placed in position.

An army officer in speaking of these trains said: "They are always improvised and fitted up with the material nearest at hand. This may be railroad iron, sheets of steel or sandbags, and sometimes nothing more than heavy lumber. We used armored trains in Porto Rico and in the Philippines, and the trains about which we read as being used in the Transvaal are probably in most respects like those improvised portable strongholds. There are some cars, like the new steel cars, which have advantages as means of transportation in a country made dangerous by an enemy, but almost any kind of cars may be turned into the class now known as 'armored' at short notice, and the armoring will depend on the mechanical skill of the officer in command."-N. Y. Tribune.

Longevity of Watches.

Watches are famous for their longev ity, and some seem to bear a charmed life, despite sundry visits to the pawnbroker and other vicissitudes of fortune. The other day a little girl found a gold watch and chain in a field at Woodburn, Bucks. The chance of discovering the rightful owner seemed faint indeed when the article was recognized by Mr. Arthur Cripps, of Great Marlow. It was one which Mr. Cripps had lost while hunting over 16 years ago. Notwithstanding its prolonged interment the works of the watch were scarcely injured .- London Telegraph.

Improving the Phonograph.

On the principle of the sounding board, which repeats a sound at so short an interval that the original and the repeated waves impress the ear in unison, a device called the polyphone has recently been applied to the phonograph for the purpose of doubling the volume of sound issuing from that instrument. A phonograph with the polyphone attachment has two horns, each provided with a diaphragm and stylus. Not only is the sound made louder, but to expose their own infamy."--Wash- its quality is improved .--- Youth's Com-

Fatherless.

There's something about the little black dress that touches a man in a very tender spot. He pats the little one on the head, puts some pennies in her hand, swallows hard and then-starts out to make his own children fatherless. There is no doubt that many a man is taken from his family by neglect of simple precautions which would preserve his health. Disease generally begins nowadays in "stomach trouble" because the meals are hasty and the food not di-gested. From that beginning come dis-orders of the blood, liver, kidneys, heart or nerves. The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition will avert the catastrophe of more serious disease. It strengthens the stomach purifies the blood, nourishes the nerves, and builds men up in both brain and body.

"I can say to you, one bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured me sound and well, after suffering two long years with stom-ach disease," writes W. H. Braswell, of McAden-ville, Gaston Co., N. C. "My health is worth all the world to une. I will praise you as long as I live."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Discovery" where a laxative is required.
