ELEVENTH ANNUAL.

Fourteen Pupils Graduate at the Commencement Exercises Last Evening—The Alumni Banquet.

Nothing so successfully brings out the people of Red Cloud as something connected with the public schools. This was noticeable last evening. Notwithstanding the threatening rain, the opera house was literally packed with a throng eager to do homage to the fourteen young men and women who graduated from our high school.

The occasion was the eleventh annual commencement. The graduating class consisted of five boys and nine girls who had reached the resting place on life's road ordinarily called commencement; the commencement of their real lives. The names of the fourteen graduates are Edward D. Platt, H. Earl Pond, Lawrence L. Pierce, Roy T. Phelps, Sherwood L. Albright, Agnes W. Brown, Ethel Hosmer, Grace Skjelver, Ida Pearl Kinsel, Jessie C. Henderson, Lorena M. Nustein, Mable L. Wells, Myra May Griffith, Nellie Gertrude Fort. Henceforth their footsteps will not be guided by a teacher near so gentle and painstaking in his efforts, but one which will bring them to a sudden realization of a mistake after it has been made. This teacher is actual experience. Their parents, relatives and friends were all present to show their interest in and appreciation of their hard school work, and offer them their congratulations on their successful closing of their school life. It was indeed a beautiful sight and one calculated never to be forgotten by the participants. The stage and indeed almost the entire opera house had undergone a change in appearance as by the hand of some magician in a fairy land. The class colors, pink and green, covered everything and the decorations of flowers were such as were never before seen on an occasion of a like character in the city, but the handsomest decoration of the entire stage was the bevy of young graduates who occupied prominent and conspicuous positions on the stage. Youth, beauty, and manhood's strength, looking with eager eyes toward the future and ready to grapple with the problems of life by reason of a trained faculty made the crowning setting of the stage one that is never to be forgotten by those who had gone there to witness the occasion.

The program as published last week was rendered from the instrumental solo by Miss Lorena M. Nustein at the top to the benediction by Rev. R. A. Barnes at the bottom without an incident to mar the proceeding, and each and every number was rendered in a manner that showed only too well how carefully the training of these young minds had been attended to by the various teachers who had had them in charge since their school days began. We would like to have taken each individual number on the program and said something of it—each was worthy—but time and space forbid, and hence we will simply have to refer to them as a whole.

Without exception the members of the class enunciated distinctly, and made the most of their elocutionary powers. Every word they uttered was plainly heard in every portion of the hall, and each received a generous amount of applause. The music throughout the program was excellent and well rendered.

George L. Keller, superintendent of the school, presented the diplomas and as each graduate received his or her diploma a look of satisfaction settled over their faces as they realized that their school days were over, and still a look of sorrow as they appeared to realize that the fourteen who had been continually together for the past few years would part with that closing, probably never to meet again in this world. The flowers, last but not least, received by the different members of the class were the most beautiful and the quantity, the largest that was ever seen on a like occasion in this city. Flowers were stacked in piles all over the stage, and they came from admiring friends, not only in Red Cloud, but from other places. Many of them were of a rare and exquisite nature and had been purchased at greenhouses in Denver, Omaha, and other cities.

After the graduation exercises were over the graduating class were taken in hand by the alumni and escorted to the Bon Ton restaurant where a sumptuous repast had been prepared for their benefit. The menu prepared was one well calculated to cause the thoughts to turn from the exciting thoughts of the past few hours and realize that the real life was before them, and the way they fell to and did justice to the edibles would lead one to believe that delivering orations helps the appetite wonderfully. R. C. Cather acted as toastmaster and a number of toasts were responded to by the members of the alumni. The feasting and merrymaking was kept up until a late hour when the tired but satisfied graduating class wended their way homeward, satisfied that their school days were over and life had begun in earnest.
