ALMOST FORGOTTEN.

Incidents of Every Day Life Which Very Few People Stop to Think About on Account of Their Littleness.

It is rather a peculiar coincidence that upon the announcement of the removal of one of our divines from the city the place has taken on undeniable signs of activity.—Whether this was an omen of good or not we are not prepared to say but it is never-the-less true that we have two brick buildings near beginning and in course of construction.—A town divided against itself will never make much headway and it is an undisputed fact that the town has in a great measure been divided since the advent of this man to our city.—Some of the worst enmities between man and man that have ever been were due to his presence here and his radical ideas.—Two brick buildings, one an opera house, which were contemplated, were lost to us on his account.—But he is gone.—Let us be friends, work for her interests and stand up for Red Cloud.—But while we are talking the City is going to take some credit for the brick buildings.—We have been talking them up for a long time and while they did not plant them where we wished, those spots will be built up with brick later.—There will be no "Woodman spare that tree" cry when the tearing down process is commenced on the Noah's Ark.—Nothing has been heard lately in regard to the poultry show but we know one entry that will be made when the time comes.—This will be James Swearingen's famous pet goose.—Jimmie has the only and the greatest goose that ever came down the pike.—He is chuck full of intelligence, almost human, and has been known to follow Jim up town like a dog.—He is full of all kinds of tricks and will kneel down and say his prayers, stand on the ground and eat corn from the top of a barrel and hop onto Jim's lap and go asleep.—He will be one of the big attractions and carry off all the premiums in his class.—Just now the coal man will get his inning and the ice man will take a rest until the time comes to harvest another crop.—At this time as a little frosty weather strikes the wayward youth in the ice cream pants he gives a sigh for the money he shoved across the table to "sweeten" the jack pot.—The one who did not dabble with the jack pot but hammered on the bar for a gin fizz, a Thomason, a sour, a straight, a cocktail, and put his face next a foaming mug of beer and the innumerable list of iced drinks, is also sad.—There is another who eschewed the fascinating pastimes before spoken of.—He is the one who dallied with the summer girl.—He thinks of the number of horses he paid the liveryman for which still belong to the liveryman and the numerous little entries on the book against him where he did not pay for the horse.—A cold chill runs down his spine when he thinks of the money that will never come back which was spent on this same summer girl for ice cream lemonade, chocolate soda, melon ice, white wings, Hobson, sunshine and Dewey.—He has a fit of chills when he thinks of that last years overcoat which will have to be replaced by another one in order to retain this same girls affection.—When these young men think of that new winter outfit they need they will feel sorry that they didn't take heed to that beautiful strain which runs thusly: "Have courage my boy to say so, have courage my boy, etc."—There is a certain class of people in every community who think themselves real cute when they are doing certain things, and everybody else thinks they are trying to make as big fools out of themselves as possible.—For instance the parties who cannot attend a political meeting of the opposite faith than themselves but who they have to let everyone know that they don't believe one bit in the speaker says, and are generally found carrying quantities and emitting cries that would make a Tom cat in a sandbar patch ashamed of itself.—They appear to be possessed with the idea that they are making a fool of somebody, and they are—of themselves.—They don't appear to have brains to realize the speaker is not talking to them individually, and that their room is better than their company.—Don't think that this applies alone to populists and democrats at a republican meeting.—It also applies to republicans at populist meetings.—We have seen republicans committing antics at a populist meeting that needed a good spanking, and we have seen populists and democrats at a republican meeting where their room would be preferable to their antics and noise.—The next time there is a political meeting just keep your eyes "peeled" and see how many of these "cuties" you can see.—Afterwards shun them.

A Letter from Racine, Wisconsin.

Racine is a great and growing city. New manufacturing buildings are going up all the time. It has 30,000 inhabitants, and all who will work are getting rich. The surrounding country is very productive, hardly ever a failure of crops. The farmers are all well to do, but they work hard. We drove down to Kenosha one day, it is eleven miles south on the lake. I had a good chance to see the country. The fruit trees amaze me, they are so loaded with fruit. The farmers all have large houses and barns, with fine surrounding grounds, and are very prosperous. Kenosha is one third as large as Racine and is a very beautiful town, the manufacturing buildings and not being situated right in the heart of the city improves the looks of it. They claim that their tanning and leather establishment is the largest in the world. It is certainly very large. We have nothing in Nebraska like the residence avenges with a lake view that they have in both of these towns. The people are peculiar and seem to be natives of all countries, and even the islands of the sea. I have made the acquaintance of some from the Orkney islands, and they are very nice people too. There are very few Americans. One day my niece and I went to Milwaukee. We walked four blocks and took an electric car which took us to the city hall in the heart of the Cream City, twenty-five miles for thirty cents. The ride through the country and the small thrifty towns was very pleasant. After looking around the city and visiting some of the department stores we went to Lake Park. The lake fascinates me. I like to look at it, but I don't want to ride on it, as it is very treacherous this month. Very many accidents have happened on it since I have been here. At Lake Park we found some very interesting monuments. One was of Solomon Juneau, the first white man that ever set foot in Milwaukee, and was the first mayor of the city. On one side he is represented as just landed and trading with the Indians for furs, and on the other he is presiding over the council as mayor.

Another one was of "Lief, son of Eric," and it states that he came from Iceland and discovered America A. D. 1000. He stands with one hand at his back holding a big horn, the other shading his brow as though to be sure it is land he sees. It was probably put up by the Scandinavians to commemorate the uncertain fame of their countryman.

The weather has been very cool here since the 15th, but it is pleasant. Fruit is plentiful in the city, apples 15 cents per bushel, peaches from ten to twenty cents per basket, and everything else in proportion. There are many democrats here, and they all say they have prospered greatly under the present administration, but still they think it will be better to have a change and they cannot give one good and sufficient reason for a change.

The month will close next week and I will be back in Red Cloud.
