

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless, too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and Homeo. Swamp-Root, dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

USELESS ACQUISITION

French Chef Who Was Out of Place with Buffalo Bill.

The Man of Many Meals Soon Came to Be Regarded as an Expensive
Luxury in the Western Wilds.

Some years ago, when Col. Cody started on a tour of the Rocky mountains as the host of a number of foreign military officers, having been feted by them in their clubs and homes, he was anxious to cater to their every taste and comfort while in camp life on this side of the great pond, relates the Detroit Free Press.

His orders were to spare no expense, and among the "luxuries" taken along was a French chef with a record and a price. He was secured from the Brown Palace hotel in Denver. Louis Pierre Gascoigne was his name; but for the long trail, and the generous price paid to him, "60 dollars a week," a cowboy said the chef consented to be called "Gas" for short.

He had the selection of the canned goods to be carried along, and turtle soup, of the very best, M. Gas ordered, and it took an extra wagon to hold them. The chef was radiant in a snow-white suit and cap, and presented the appearance the first night in camp of a ghost, and was regarded with superstitious suspicion by the cowboys and others of that ilk.

"Gas" set in to show the wild westerners a thing or two in the culinary art by his first camp dinner. He had a patent cooking stove, the wide world for a kitchen with heaven for a roof, while china, fine linen and wines were right at hand. Six o'clock was the dinner hour that first night at the base of the San Francisco mountains, and Gas was in raptures over his dinner. Buffalo Bill, the host, looked serious, the guests more so. Such a dinner they could get in any club in a city, but they did not say so, if they did keep up a devil of a thinking. It was not what Col. Cody liked, but it was what he thought he ought to have for his distinguished guests. The latter stood for two days and then went on a strike.

"I say, Cody," ventured Sir St. John Mildmay, major of the Grenadier Guards, "do you call this wild western camp fare and cooking? You see, we are all half dead with dyspepsia now, and thought we would get some good, wholesome food on this thou sand-mile trip in the saddle without sand.

The others joined in the chorus to the same effect, while monsieur, the chef, looked as solemn as a country parson's horse. As for Col. Cody, he beamed with delight, said that Rocky mountain trails and table d'hôte dinners didn't mix well, and Gas was at once given leave to go along, as he couldn't be sent back, as an ornament, a useless acquisition, and two scouts were installed as cooks. And with the chef, the canned goods, china, fine linen and the stove were sealed up in the wagon, and tin plates and cups were brought forth.

And such cooking as these scouts did could not be improved upon, while Col. Cody showed that he was a first-class cook himself. He could throw a flapjack from a frying pan into the air 15 feet, turn it over and have it come down on the other side, never once making a miss and falling into the fire. The guests tried to learn this trick, but it was found too expensive, as they never missed the fire, but always the frying pan. M. Louis Pierre Gascoigne could not be prevailed upon to taste any of the frontier cooking, but stuck to his soups and plum puddings, while he looked as though he had buried his best friend. He sought excitement in riding a broncho, and was thrown daily. He took to a wagon and was upset, after which he walked, dropped behind, and was scared nearly to the ground by the Indians. One day he stood looking up disconsolately at the sun and said in a funeral tone: "Dat sun do shine for all persun, but it do not just seem to shine for me."

When the long trail ended at Salt Lake City the French chef was the only one of the party who had indigestion, and he drowned his sorrows by getting gloriously drunk, hence was happy for the time being. But Col. Cody braced him up and returned him to Denver, having paid well for a "luxury" not to be taken on a Rocky mountain trail.

Invention to Bar Intruders.

Nervous travelers who dread sleeping in unknown houses will welcome the so-called "vigilant dragon," which is not unlike a small brass-shelled tortoise. It is, in fact, a dome-gong table bell, with spiked legs and with a spiked dragon's head. When a bedroom door is closed the spikes are placed in the floor and against the door, and then the dragon's tail just touches the floor. This tail is connected with the bell clapper, so that if anyone endeavors to open the door from the outside an obstacle is met with, and the alarm is given. When the anxious watches of the night are over the "vigilant dragon" becomes a reposeful bell for the writing table.—London Express.

Blast-Furnace Gas-Motors.

In western Europe, and particularly in Germany, the employment of motors utilizing gases from blast furnaces is increasing. It is said that the use of these gases, which is not so common in England or the United States, effects a considerable saving in the cost of founding. The motors thus driven are employed principally for actuating air compressors and electric generators.—Science.

The broom must go! A French hygienic journal states that in Tunis the mortality from tuberculosis is 11.5 per 1,000 among the Arabs, and only 0.75 per 1,000 among the Jews, who lead pretty much the same life as the Arabs, except that they daily clean all their furniture with moist cloths, and never stir up the germinated dust with brooms.

The skunk first appears in history in the year 1636, when he was described in Theodat's History of Canada. He had been a long time on the earth before that time, however, for there are species of fossil skunks. The skunks of the genus Chinchia range over the greater part of North America and as far south as Mexico. Other skunks are found in Central and South America.

PRAYERS FOR A STIPEND.

French Abbe Who Has Made a Town Prosperous by a Novel Traffic.

There is a small village in the department of the Sarthe, in France, that has arisen from poverty to affluence by means of prayer furnished on demand for a consideration. The cure of the village, a certain Abbe Buguet, was as poor as his flock. But he was not content to stay that way and, being a man of imagination, he looked around for some means by which he could better the condition of his people and incidentally his own. He finally hit upon an idea, says a London exchange. He learned to set type, bought a secondhand hand press and set up, printed and published a leaflet in which he discussed upon the efficacy of prayer. Then he made a business proposition to his flock. He would pray for them, for their children and for their dead for an annual subscription of one sou. In other words, he would take charge of all their prayers for one sou a year. The idea appealed to his parishioners and all of them subscribed. With the little sums thus acquired he printed more leaflets and distributed them throughout the neighboring country and every leaflet seemed to bring in a new subscriber.

To-day he has many thousands of subscribers who live in all parts of the world, and Montligeon, which was once little more than a collection of hovels, is a prosperous town. It has a church that is a cathedral. It has wide streets lighted by electric lights, a post office, waterworks and cab service. And in the center of the town is a large white building where Abbe Buguet, with eight almoners, 15 interpreters, 20 secretaries and a crowd of clerks, proceeds with his work of supplying prayers. More than 1,500 letters come each day, each of them containing at least the required sou, and most of them having a much larger sum. A part of these letters ask for prayers and these are divided among various needy priests in the neighborhood, who thus are able to add considerably to their meager incomes. All the voluntary offerings go into the general treasury and are used for the benefit of the town and the valley in which it is situated. The mayor of the town is the cashier and the principal counters are the secretaries or chief accountants and Abbe Buguet is manager of all. It is the most profitable prayer factory in the world.

Lawyer (examining accused pickpocket, testifying in his own behalf)—You deny this special charge, and yet admit that you have committed similar offenses. Perhaps you'll be good enough to tell the court just how long you've been in this business?

Pickpocket (nonchalantly)—Oh, not more than two or three months.

Lawyer—Only two or three months, eh? How do you expect the court to believe that statement in view of the fact that it has had police testimony to the effect that you are an expert?

Pickpocket (smilingly)—Oh, well, you must remember that I had the benefit of a three years' previous practice in your profession.—Richmond Dispatch.
