There was quite a lively time at the school meeting Monday. The actions of the school committee, who are V. S. Hall, J. L. Grandstaff and A. P. Johnson, were severely criticised by the patrons of the district. They tried hard to explain their position, but it was of no use, but they were taken up and turned down at every turn they attempted to make. The people of the district were organized under the leadership of the fearless "little giant," E. H. Cox of Glenwood township, who in his speech told the school board that their actions and their plans laid in their secret star chamber meetings were blacker than the smoke that rolled from the smokestack of hades. The meeting got pretty warm and, while it did not come to blows, members of the school board were called liars several times, and a motion was put before the people asking the members of the school board to resign forthwith, which carried almost unanimously, only two voting against the motion. V. S. Hall, "the emperor," as he is known here in town, was moderator of the meeting and continually refused to put the motions that came before the meeting. It looked at one time as if no levy would be made for a school in Bladen this year. All the trouble seemed to arise because the board hired a teacher, who made a failure of the school last year, at an advance in salary of $10 per month, and against the wishes of three-fourths of the patrons of the district, and the expulsion of some five or six scholars last spring. Finally it was voted that a levy of 10 mills on all taxable property be made; that female teachers be employed in both rooms and that nine months school be held. Just how all this will end we are curious to know, as the two factions, the school board and the people, will not unite on the teacher employed by the board.
