It is about time, in the shifting economy of morals and the new demands on them for high grade exploitations of right and wrong, for the newspapers to either tell the truth about a dead man or let him alone. A bad man when dead is a dead bad man. What is the use or the sense of throwing over him a mantle of charity so thick and vast that it is really a joke? Another wise reform, too, would be never to mention suicides.—Clay Center, Kan., Times.

It is too bad to find that a watchdog is a sheep-killer, but that is usually the case with watchdogs who bark too much and ostentatiously display their watchfulness. We are led into this train of thought by the discovery that a certain Omaha editor with an aromatic name has had his hand in the state's pocket, and was removing shekels therefrom, even while he was yelping loudest against the tax evading railroads and other dream bogies. Can him!—Nebraska City Weekly.

At the only point the fusionists are trying to make is that J. H. Mickey is a banker and therefore he is not entitled to be trusted with the Nebraska gubernatorial reins. If this be true, then why do the fusionists favor A. C. Shallenberger for congress when every mother's son of them in the Fifth congressional district knows that Shallenberger is a banker? The fusionists are, and always have been, inconsistent and therefore they are always kept in hot water.—Hastings Tribune.

A cheerful disposition is one of the greatest blessings that can be bestowed upon mortal man. Wealth or poverty, physical vigor or infirmity are matters of little importance in comparison. Many an individual surrounded by conditions conducive to happiness leads a life of wretchedness for lack of habitual cheerfulness. Low spirits may be caused by ill health. Perhaps in most cases they are thus caused, but in some instances the difficulty seems a matter of habit. A man of this description grows at his wife, scowls at the children, kicks the dog, swears at the cow and makes himself and everyone about him entirely miserable. Such an individual either deserves profound sympathy or he ought to be hung.—Ohioan.

Senatorial Convention.

Last Tuesday afternoon the Republican senatorial convention of the 26th district, composed of the counties of Nuckolls, Webster and Franklin, met in the opera house in Superior and nominated Geo. L. Day of Superior on the first ballot. After the nomination, Mr. Day was called for and responded in a very graceful little speech, accepting the nomination and thanking the convention for the honor of heading the Republican legislative ticket.

E. M. Short was chosen as committee man for Franklin county, J. Warren Keifer committee man for Nuckolls county and J. B. Statser for Webster county. J. W. Keifer of Bostwick was chosen as chairman of the senatorial committee and W. E. Buck as secretary. George L. Day was born in White Water, Wis., in 1857. He attended common school at that place and also the Wisconsin State Normal school, afterward studying dentistry at the Philadelphia Dental college. He practiced dentistry in his old home for a few years, but his health not being very good he came west, landing in Superior in September, 1879, where he has since been engaged in the lumber business. He was elected and served as mayor of Superior in 1895, and in 1900 was one of the delegates to the Republican national convention and helped nominate McKinley and Roosevelt. He has always been a consistent Republican and one of the party's most strenuous workers, and we predict his election by the largest majority ever given to a senatorial candidate in this district.

ROOSEVELT'S NARROW ESCAPE

President's Carriage Wrecked and His Body Guard Instantly Killed.

At Pittsfield, Mass., Wednesday afternoon President Roosevelt escaped a tragic death by only a few feet in a collision between his carriage and a trolley car, while one of his most trusted guards, Secret Service Agent William Craig, was instantly killed and David J. Pratt of Dalton, who was guiding the horses attached to the vehicle, was seriously injured. President Roosevelt himself was badly shaken up, but received only a slight facial bruise. Secretary Cortelyou, who occupied a seat directly opposite the President in the landau, got a minor wound in the back of the head. Governor Crane of Massachusetts, who sat beside the President, escaped practically without a scratch.

The carriage was demolished and the horse on the side nearest the car was killed. The crew and passengers of the car escaped injury.

The accident occurred while the President and party were driving from Pittsburg to Lenox, through South street, one of the principal thoroughfares of Pittsfield. The accident was witnessed by hundreds of people, who had gathered to greet the President.

This morning's papers state that all the injured persons are getting along nicely, though President Roosevelt was still much distressed by the tragic death of his friend, Detective Craig.

Young Plants

Every farmer knows that some plants grow better than others. Soil may be the same and seed may seem the same but some plants are weak and others strong.

And that's the way with children. They are like young plants. Same food, same home, same care but some grow big and strong while others stay small and weak.

Scott's Emulsion offers an easy way out of the difficulty. Child weakness often means starvation, not because of lack of food, but because the food does not feed.

Scott's Emulsion really feeds and gives the child growing strength.

Whatever the cause of weakness and failure to grow—Scott's Emulsion seems to find it and set the matter right.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

To the Electors of Webster County and All Others Interested.

Be it generally known, that on June 21, 1902, there was a People's Party county convention held in Red Cloud, in said county, for the purpose of placing in nomination a county attorney and a Representative to the next Legislature. On the informal ballot the delegates favored the nomination of L. C. Peisiger for Representative. At this point I asked and was granted the privilege of addressing the convention, believing it to be my duty to make known the action of L. C. Peisiger on the freight rate bill in the last Legislature, by stating to the delegates then and there assembled, that on or about March 14, 1901, I noticed in the daily papers that L. C. Peisiger, Representative from said county, had voted in the house against J. C. Sprecher's freight rate bill, known as house roll No. 243, in which was asked a general reduction on freight rates of 15 per cent; also, that prior to the meeting of the last Legislature and after the decision on the Newberry bill, the railroads of the state raised the rates on live stock and grain, thereby taking out of the pockets of the farmers of the state and placing in the vaults of the above railroads about the sum of three hundred thousand dollars a year, over and above the rates that were in force at the time of the passage of the Newberry bill. As I had about finished, Mr. Householder, who was float Representative from Webster and Adams counties, asked if he might explain. I said, "Certainly, sir." He did so by stating that there were two freight bills; that the other bill, known as the Ollis bill, was preferable to Mr. Sprecher's bill, himself having voted for the Sprecher bill, and that L. C. Peisiger voted against it on that account. At this point Mr. O. R. Pitney, Senator from this, Franklin and Nuckolls counties, spoke up and said this was so, for he remembered something to that effect. Of course I took my seat, having been knocked out for awhile, and Mr. Peisiger was nominated. Now, I claim and make the statement that this legislative contingent was in league with one another for the purpose of a renomination, and that they did then and there distort, pervert, vilify, and fawn at the feet of Mammon, and the house journal and the senate journal will bear me out. As to the Sprecher bill, or house roll No. 243, I ask you to look in the house journal on pages 280-297 and 926 and 927. You will notice that this was the general freight measure; that the Ollis bill, described later on, related to live stock only. The Sprecher bill was read the first time on January 24, 1901, and on the second time on January 25, 1901, was referred to the committee on railroads. It was reported back to the house on March 14, 1901, by the railroad committee for indefinite postponement, and was postponed by such men as L. C. Peisiger voting for the railroad corporations. There were four Republican members who voted for the bill, and if the fusion forces had voted as they were elected to vote the bill would have been placed on general file; but they seemed to be in a great hurry to kill the bill.

As I was not satisfied in regard to Mr. Householder's explanation, I wrote Mr. J. C. Sprecher, who was the leader in the house on the fusion side, to explain to me in regard to the Ollis bill. He answered, stating that the Ollis bill, known as house roll No. 255, was only a stock rate bill, relating to live stock; that it passed the house regardless of party, but that the senate killed it; that O. R. Pitney was a dodger on this bill, making two Judases from Webster county. Had this ratio held good throughout the state we would have had about 180. But, behold! I had the honor of being selected as a delegate to the senatorial convention held in Red Cloud for the counties of Nuckolls, Webster and Franklin. There were but four delegates from Webster, three from Franklin and none from Nuckolls, and as O. R. Pitney was seeking the second nomination I faced him with the charge that he was no better than Peisiger. He wanted to know why, and I said he dodged the Ollis bill. He at first denied it, when I showed him Sprecher's letter, who he defamed by saying he was crazy. But, on going into the convention and reading the Sprecher letter, he sang another tune. He said while in the senate he received word from home that his family was sick and that he left the evening before the last day, claiming that the Ollis bill was voted upon on the last day. As he had made two or three bobbles already, I thought I would look the matter up. I procured the house journal and the senate journal and, as expected, I found on looking over the senate journal that O. R. Pitney attended the last day of the legislature answering to roll call in the morning also in the afternoon after recess and I found that he voted on nearly all bills coming up the last day and on the one just prior to the Ollis bill being No. 460 then the Ollis bill came up and when Pitney's name was called he was absent, he had dodged. And to sustain what I have said, in regard to O. R. Pitney, I refer you to senate journal pages 827, 850, 884 to 940 and 1077 which you can see in the court house in Red Cloud, or at my residence in Cowles and I will be pleased to show any parties that wish to look the journal over. As regards the Ollis bill, four republican members voted for it, this would have been sufficient if the fusion senators had toed the mark. But instead, the fusion forces killed all anti-monopoly legislation, in the last legislature, and those from Webster county want to go back so that they can do the job over again. I shall expect all the Wall Street crew to vote for the above nominees; but believe there is enough honest men in Webster county to send that will vote, at least, for the cardinal principles of the Peoples Party, the lowering of rates, for which all the people would call them blessed. Judas betrayed his master for "30 pieces of silver," afterwards bringing them to the temple and throwing them down then going out and hanging himself. Might it be possible for others to do likewise. Truly yours, ED. GILFORD, Cowles, Nebr., Sept. 1, '02.

Reception at Overman's.

A most enjoyable progressive quadrum luncheon party was given last Wednesday evening, from 6 to 9 o'clock by Mrs. E. U. Overman, at her home on Cedar St. to a large number of her lady friends. The tables were beautifully decorated with sweet peas and lighted with candles. Mrs. Overman showed herself to be a most tactful hostess making her guests feel entirely at home and helping them in their enjoyment of the evening. The luncheon was given in honor of Mrs. Rippley, of Illinois, who is visiting Mrs. Overman. Mrs. R. Damerell assisted Mrs. Overman in the reception and entertainment of the guests.
