Odd Fellows Picnic

The Annual Harvest Home picnic of the Odd Fellows was held in Garber grove south east of this city, Wednesday, and was considering the weather quite well attended. There were a large number of Odd Fellows here from other places. The lodge and visiting Odd Fellows met at the hall at 10:30 and headed by the Superior band marched in a body to the grove. The Rev. U. G. Brown of Superior delivered a short address on Odd Fellowship which was listened to with marked attention and while the address was short still it was appreciated by all who heard it. After the address dinner and all present sat down to a most bountiful feast. After dinner various games and amusements were indulged in. The tug of war between the Guide Rock lodge and Red Cloud was won by Red Cloud's heavy weights. There were two heats in this race and the first heat was won easily by Red Cloud but in the second heat it required both science and strength to win. The horse ploughing contest was won by Wm. Engells and J. H. Bailey. The ladies running race was very much enjoyed and was won by the Mesdames Saladen. The fat man's race was won by county clerk Garber by just a part of the length of his long nose. Miss Mabel Saunders was the winner of the ladies tomato race and Irving Ely won the tomato race for men. In the 25 yard and 100 yard stake race Oliver Hedge was the winner and Chas. Frisbie the Amboy milling man of course won the sack race. The running race was won by Frank Whitmer. The various game, races and amusements were highly enjoyed by all. In the evening the members of this lodge and visiting lodges initiated five candidates into the mysteries of the order. F. W. Cowden and D. W. Turnure are to be highly commended for their efforts to make this picnic the grand success that it was.

A Medieval Megaphone.

A curiosity of great antiquity is still to be seen within St. Andrew's church at Willoughton, near Gainsborough, says an English magazine. This is a quaint speaking trumpet with an obscure early history, dating back to the times of the Knights Templars. In shape it resembles a French horn and is more than five feet long, having a bell at the end of the graduated tube. It was formerly six feet in length, but is now telescoped at the joints, where the metal has apparently decayed. Tradition declares it was formerly sounded from the tower to summon aid in case of need, as, when blown at a height, the weird, deep notes the trumpet produced could be heard a great distance away in bygone days. It is believed that this curious instrument has often been used to call together the villagers, thus dispensing with the usual bell, and to give additional power and strength to the choir, being then probably used by the chief singer, as the trumpet intensifies vocal sound to a marked degree.

Henpecked For a Day.

In the little hamlet of Nordhastedt, near Meldorf, a singular custom is observed annually. According to tradition, it dates back to the thirteenth century. During that era the hamlet was on one occasion attacked by a band of robbers, and the men of the village were soon compelled to beat a retreat.

Thereupon the women boldly attacked the robbers and not only vanquished them, but also took the leader and several of the band prisoners. As a token of their gratitude the men have ever since allowed the women to celebrate this great event by holding a festival at stated intervals, and on such occasions they exercise no authority themselves, but submit in all things to the will of the women.

The latter greatly enjoy their temporary supremacy and, as a symbol thereof, never fail to fasten a large wooden slipper to every lamp and chandelier in the hamlet.

A Great Stickler For Etiquette.

Dr. Thompson, master of Trinity college, Cambridge, was an exceedingly cold and austere man, never taking much notice of the undergraduates under his care. On one occasion a Trinity man happened to be out walking and was caught in a storm. He ran across a field and took shelter beneath a large tree. When he arrived there, he found, to his horror, that Dr. Thompson was beneath it seeking protection from the rain. For some time they stood silent, watching the clouds, till at last the undergraduate, growing desperate, ventured to remark that he thought it was clearing up a little.

"Sir," said the doctor haughtily, frowning upon the wretched youth, "all communications to the master of Trinity must be made through the tutors."—Exchange.
