Miss Twiss is a young lady of many accomplishments and is highly respected by those who know her. She has been an employee in the Hastings asylum, in the cutting and fitting department, for the past eight years. The Chief joins with their friends in wishing them prosperity, few sorrows and many years of happiness.

Pressure is being brought to bear on the county commissioners to have them rescind the order to remove the county judge's office to the court house. There are many phases of this matter which have not yet been made public and which we do not care to publish, but unless the pressure is relieved we may find it necessary to do so. The plea that there is not sufficient room in the court house for the county judge's office is specious, but the fact remains that by a little work the rooms can be so arranged that there will be sufficient room to accommodate all the county offices or county property. The story that is being circulated that this move is made for the sole purpose of having an excuse to issue bonds for a new court house, is untrue. While the present court house is old, and a new one would be very nice yet we believe that a new court house is not needed now, nor will it be for some years to come.

Thanksgiving in Red Cloud

Thanksgiving day in Red Cloud was bright and cheerful. The day was all that could have been expected and was celebrated in a style jolly enough to please the most fastidious and suit the prosperity of the season, for plenty stalked on every hand. It was truly a day of Thanksgiving, for turkey and all the "fixtures" teemed in nearly every home, and the general prosperity, which has provided an abundance of provisions and filled the markets with good things to eat, gladdened the hearts of not a few who only a few short years since were drinking from the bitter cup of poverty. There was no business transacted at the court house, all the county offices being closed. Nearly all the business houses closed at noon to give the employes an opportunity to witness the sports and enjoy the day as they saw fit, and those who did not avail themselves of this opportunity surely have no good reason to complain. The features of the day were a 300 hundred yard horse race, a five mile gas as you please human race and a foot ball contest between the Franklin and Red Cloud elevens. In the evening there was music, dancing, entertainments and amusements of various kinds.

That Football Game.

Pluck, determination and gentlemanly deportment were the notable features displayed by the Red Cloud boys in the Thanksgiving day football game. Franklin came down with a team of boys (?) weighing on an average of twenty pounds and anyone who saw them will not doubt the accuracy of the statement. But undaunted by handicap of weight, the Red Cloud boys went eagerly into the game. Red Cloud won the toss, giving it the choice of either goal or "kickoff." The wind blowing from the south, made it advisable to choose that goal and give Franklin the "kickoff." Then the game began and kept up in hot fury during the first half, and when that was ended the home boys were already covered with glory. The first half ended without a score.

After ten minutes intermission, the second half was begun and our boys still held them down well, but toward the close superior weight was beginning to tell and Franklin forced our boys to within five feet of the goal, then Red Cloud gained the ball, but Franklin claimed it. The umpire decided in favor of the home team, at which the Franklin fellows became discouraged and forfeited the game by quitting before the close of the second half. Red Cloud wins by a score of 6 to 0.

The gate receipts were $50.00, and after all expenses are paid there will be nearly $25.00 left in the treasury toward football suits. The manager admitted many poor boys and others who had no money, but was surprised to see well-dressed and prosperous looking people "stealing" in. We trust that they are ashamed.

Now, let the boys get at their studies with the same vim they displayed in football and they will retain the admiration of the community.

About Fast Trains

The Burlington Route aspires to maintain the reputation of conducting the fastest trains between Chicago and Denver on the main line. As to whether or not it wishes to maintain a reputation for conducting the slowest trains between Hastings and Oberlin, or any other intermediate points, is mere conjecture. At any rate, if it does not aspire to the latter, it has, at least, acquired the name, as can be testified to by the hundreds of patrons who add to the passenger traffic of the road daily.

The distance from Red Cloud to Hastings is forty-two miles. The schedule time of trains between these two points is three hours and forty-five minutes. Sometimes the time is sufficient, but nine times in ten it is short from one hour to six hours and fifty-nine minutes.

Monday morning, train No. 173 left the Hastings depot on time—9:00 o'clock—and was due here at 11:55, the time southbound being ninety minutes less than the northbound. At Blue Hill, this conveyor of passengers, freight, baggage, express, United States mail, etc., etc., was thirty-five minutes late; at Cowles, forty-five minutes, and when it was pulled out of Amboy it had attained a lateness of over six hours. At this latter point the company was excusable, owing to an accident—the breaking of a rail while switching at the mill. The passengers aboard—forty or more—of course, were desirous of reaching their several destinations. After a long wait, repeated appeals were made for some mode of transportation to Red Cloud, they being entitled to it, having paid their fares. Conveyance of any kind, however, was not forthcoming, except at an extra extra expense of the passengers. The company was, however, generous and allowed them the unpleasant privilege of reaching Red Cloud as best they could. Seven traveling salesmen, who had appointments with customers at this as well as other points, were conveyed to the city by means of Joe Pavelicek and his team of sturdy and faithful mules, while thirty or more other passengers were compelled to resort to riding in hacks or carriages, walking or remaining until the dark of the evening, when the train was finally pulled into the yards by the local switch engine.

While the accident at Amboy was, no doubt, of an unavoidable character, it would seem, however, that if the company, or those officials vested with the power to act on an occasion of this kind, had been considerate for the welfare and interest of the patrons, they would, at least, have furnished transportation of some kind into the city, if it had been nothing more than a number of "rubber" cars (so-called) with a hand car as propelling power.

Moral: When traveling between Red Cloud and Hastings, and you are in a hurry, ride behind a team of mules or walk. It's safer.
