UPHAM ADAMS Author of "The Kidnapped Millionaires," "Colonel Monroe's Dectrine," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1902, BY FREDERICK UPRAM ADAMS

A. J. DRUXBL BIDDLE

Chapter XVIII-Continued.

That evening Arthur Morris called to his suit he had not the slightest doubt. He had carefully rehearsed his avowal. After critically reviewing the side of the bridge. his campaign since quitting Paris he decided that he had made no mis-

He made his declaration confidently. but with more of feeling than Jessie thought him capable. "Mr. Morris," she said with an earnestness which almost tricked herself, "I owe a duty to my father which I cannot forego. He is alone and in trouble, and I cannot leave him. You know little of the pride of the Cardens if you imagine that the daughter of General Marshall Carden will give her hand in marriage so long as the shadow of bankruptcy hangs over his name." Morris again assured Jessie of his absolute confidence in General Carden's financial future, and attempted to secure some conditional promise from her.

"I am willing to wait, don't you know," he said. "I'm sure General Carden will come out all right. Go marry me when you return." He gazed longingly at her.

"No. I will promise not to marry within the next two years. Will that satisfy you?"

Morris left Jessie's presence wild with delight over his fancied success. A few days later General Carden arrived from Boston, and held several conferences with Arthur Morris. One night he greeted Jessie with unusual tenderness. The old proud light was in his eyes. His shoulders were thrown back and his step was elastic.

"I am no longer a bankrupt, Jessie, my darling." he said, when they were alone. "I have so disposed of my secarities to Mr. Morris that I am able enough remaining to send you abroad, York."

Jessie remained behind. Back through the swiftly-flying years her when, under the tuition of a sturdy farmer lad, she fished for crabs over

Did John Burt yet live? Did she yet hold the place in his heart she occupied on that night, when, under the Would be return? When? The little brook, flowing towards the ocean on the outgoing tide, seemed the sole connecting link between the past and

The clatter of hoofs aroused Jessie from her reverie. She looked up to

"What attraction has that muddy old creek?" demanded Edith. "Come on, Jessie; uncle Tom has sounded disappeared in a turn of the road. abroad if you like, but promise to Half an hour later she stopped in great oaken door swung back and Peter Burt came towards her. There was a kindly gleam in his eye, as, with a courtly air, he bowed and ber me, my child," he said, as he gave her his hand and helped her to dismount. "Jasper, take care of Miss Carden's horse! We will sit in the shade of the trees; it is cool and pleasant here. How is your father, my child?"

Since you saw him he has had finan-

Blouse Waist With Bolero.

Boleros are among the few accessories of dress that are almost universally becoming and are among the most fashionable of all garments at the present time. This very attractive waist includes one that shows plaits over the shoulders, which give the broad line, and wide sleeves of elbow length that are most effective over the full puffed ones of the waist. As illustrated the bolero and belt are made of antique green taffeta, trimmed with ecru lace and ball fringe, while the waist is of white mull and matches the skirt; but holero and skirt ofter are made of the same material, with the waist of some thinner fabric. Silk, wool, linen and cotton are all so used and all can be rendered charming, but nothing is lovelier than the linen and "Has anything been heard of John mercerized materials, which are very nearly legion.

The waist consists of a fitted lining. which can be used or omitted as preferred, front and back of blouse, with the full sleeves, and the bolero, which is quite separate and is made with fronts, back and bell sleeves. The waist is full and blouses over the draped belt, the closing being made invisibly at the center, and is finished with a regulation stock. The bolero is exceedingly simple and is laid in outward-turning plaits that fall over the arms-eye seams.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is: For blouse, 4% vards 21 inches wide, 4 vards 27 inches wide or 2% yards 44 inches wide, with one-half yard of all-over lace and one-half yard of silk for belt; for bolero, 214 yards 21 inches wide, 2 yard 27 inches wide or 1% yards 44 inches wide, with 5 yards of banding and 31/2 yards of fringe, to make as

Raisins for fruit cake are much improved by cooking. Let them soak slowly and then simmer until the skin

If silver is washed every week in warm suds containing a tablespoonful of ammonia the polish can be pre-perforated round enameled ware to fit in the bottom of saucepans to prevent food sticking to the pans or burning, keep a wire discloth to set in the bottom of the kettle.

For washing tan, brown or linen by pouring boiling water over hay. When bread is baked the loaves should never be set flat on the table or shelf, but should be set on end, one loaf against another, and wrapped closely round with a clean cloth. This makes the crusts tender by keeping in the steam

Lace on Hats.

Point d'esprit and the oid-fashloned blonde lace is fashioned into Marie Antoinette hats, a fall of lace coming well over the edge of the brim and a garland of small flowers encircling the crown, with a deep fall of lace in the back. A dainty hat of fine white chip has a brim of tucked lawn and a frill of fine embroidery hanging down from the brim in the back, and it has two pink satin ribbons running in and out of the Old Fashioned Pot Pourri.

A genuine old-fashioned pot pourri is made as follows: Pack half a peck of fragrant rose leaves in a bowl in layers with salt, using a small handful of fine salt to three of rose leaves Let them stand in this way for five days, turning them twice daily. This should be done thoroughly. At the end of this time add three ounces of powdered allspice and one ounce of stick simmamon.

week longer, stirring as before once each day. Now put them into the permanent pot pourri jar, mixing The Latest Styles in Costumes-How to Make an Old-Fashioned Pot Pourri-Suggestions of Value to Housewife.

THE COMPONENT

lavender blossoms, one ounce of bruised cloves, one more ounce of stick cinnamon, another of allspice, one nutmeg coarsely grated, a cupful of ginger root thinly sliced, half an ounce of anise seed, ten grains of Canton musk (finest quality) and finally two ounces of orris root. Mix them well together and place the jar in any suitable corner of the parlor or living room. A few drops of attar of rose or any desired extract of flowers can be added at any time.

The New Handkerchief Kimonas. Kimonas made from large, square handkerchiefs have taken a new twist this season. Instead of brilliant bandanas and the old-fashioned combinations of dark blue and white, or vivid red and white, the most delicate colorings are seen.

The center of the handkerchief shows delicate pink, blue, green, yellow or lavender, with a dainty border in pale Persian colors or Dresden effects, with the color of the center predominating in the conventional or floral design. Another difference in the style lies in the fact that the points of the handkerchiefs are brought to the neck line and then turned over to form a small, shawlshaped collar.

Shawls a Fad of Fashion. Shawls are Seen in rather unusual numbers. There are enough of them to suggest a revival of the 1830 and 1850. fashion. The silk shawls are specially attractive, embroidered in self or a contrasting color. Pale salmon pink is embroidered in white; dull rich magenta has a pattern worked in red of a deeper tone. Of course all the usual pinks, pale blues and creams are also strongly in evidence. Pengee color,

Told in Her Boudoir

with stitchery in white or yellow, is pretty and more unusual.

Ashes of rose, butter color and palest blues and pinks are seen in profusion.

Big green gooseberries and little white roses combine on some modish millinery. A silver cross succeeds the jeweled heart so long worn at the end of a frail chain. Petticoats of wash mohair in pongee color are attractive and serviceable novelties. Those small brocaded eighteenth century "mules" are attractive footwear for around the house.

All discord in dress is to be avoided, be utterly flat looking.

and a costume all is one shade gains immeasurably in style.

Ecru lawns and India lineas are substitutes for natural linen bastiste and grass cloth, and mercerized champagne are substitutes for Shantung pongees and the other natural-colored silks now so much in vogue.

Paris Muslin and Lace.

Every woman of taste likes to be the possessor of dainty underwear, well made and carefully fitted. This very simple little corset cover is shaped on admirable lines and combines perfect smoothness at the back with becoming fuliness over the bust and can be made so readily and easily as to commend it to every seeker after desirable garments. As shown the material is Paris muslin with trimming of lace, but any of the materials in use for underwear can be substituted and trimming can be either lace or embroidery. To make the corset cover for a woman of medium size will be required 11/4 yards of material 36 inches wide.

Design by May Manton.

To Wash an Eiderdown Quilt.

Preface the washing by mending any little holes in the sateen. Then prepare a suds with warm water and boiled soap, and in this plunge the quilt. Squeeze with the hands till the water becomes dirty, then place in fresh suds and repeate the process till clean. Rinse out the soap in as many changes of water as necessary; squeeze out the water, shake the quilt, and hang out to dry. When dry, shake it till it is quite soft and full. On no account use a mangle or the quilt will

PONGEE AND LACE.

Coats of pongee with collars and | tional fulness and provides becoming for young girls and are both charming and serviceable, inasmuch as they provide just the warmth needed on a them first with half a pound of dried plait at the back which gives addi- 52 inches wide.

trimming of lace are eminently smart folds. The sleeves are full and ample and the coat can be worn open or closed, made with or without the collar. The quantity of material required summer day. This one is exceeding- for the medium size (10 years) is 51/4 ly simple but includes an inverted yards 21, 21/2 yards 44 or 21/2 yards on Jessie. Of her favorable answer fancy wandered to the summer day old maples, she rested against his breast and bade him a sad farewell? the future.

see Edith coming towards her.

Bishop went to Boston on a shopping expedition, but they could not persuade Jesise to accompany them. In the afternoon she ordered her horse saddled, and, declining an escort, soon

She had not dismounted when the greeted her. "It is thoughtful of you to remem-

-A BANKA my pet. And Mr. Morris has given's. Nellie Caster of Riverton, was bers chance to work into a partnership." that his eyes were upon har, not un-"Oh, that's splendid!" exclaimed Jessie. "Are you sure you will not be disappointed? Is it all arranged beyond any doubt?" "Here is the check," said General Carden, with some surprise. "Why do you ask, Jessie?"

"Because I wish to go to Paris as spoa as possible," was the answer. 'I am just crazy to take up my painting and music. And now I can go. can't L papa?"

"Certainly, my pet." Arthur Morris called that evening, and vainly attempted to persuade her to spend the summer in Hingham, and postpone her trip abroad until autumn.

He bade her an effusive farewell. and Jessie gave a happy sigh of relief when the train rolled out from the station.

CHAPTER XIX.

Two Strange Interviews. It was delightful to be again in the old-fashioned country house overlooking the ocean. Jessie confessed to Edith Hancock that her anxiety to return to Paris was assumed.

"I would be perfectly happy in this dear old place all summer-were it not for one discord," she said to Edith | my child?" as they galloped along the beach the first evening after their arrival in Hingham. "Yonder is a suggestion of what is driving me to a foreign land."

Jessie pointed with her riding whip at the red-tiled roof of the Morris mansion, seen several miles away through a cleft in the hills.

"Do you mean that you are flying from Arthur Morris?" Edith's dark eyes opened wide. "I do. I prefer the society of strangers abroad rather than to tolerate his occasional presence here," answered Jessie, biting her lip in vexation. They cantered in silence until they came to the old bridge where Jessie first met John Burt. There she reined to her bay. "We'll let the horses rest here a moment," she said. "I always liked this spot. Isn't the view charming across the level of the marsh to the rocks and the dark fringe of pines berond?" "It's much better at the top of the bill," insisted Edith and wondered what Jessie could find to admire in the prosaic surroundings. *Come on, lessie," and she touched her roan with the whip.

the horn for dinner." On the morrow Edith and Mrs.

front of Peter Burt's farmhouse.

"He is very well," answered Jessie. cial trouble, but his affairs are in to pay all of my debts and have better shape now. He lives in New and Mrs. Geo. Morhart were ping in Guide Rock the first of the pars me a position in his bank, with ring in Red Cr strence followed the Runt kindly, but searching, friendly and magnetic. Almost unconsciously she addressed him:

"Have you received any word or heard anything from John, Mr. Burt?" He paused for a moment as if to weigh his words.

"I have heard from him," he said deliberately. "He is alive and well." "Alive and well!" she exclaimed, her eyes glistening with excitement.

"He is alive and well," repeated Peter Burt. This strange interview took place more than two years before James Blake returned from California, and as has been narrated inadvertently gave to Peter Burt his first verbal information concerning John Burt.

"Listen to me, my child," said Peter Burt, impressively, "and have faith in every word I say to you. John is in a far-off land, and there he shall remain until the time ordained for his return. Seek not to call him away from fields not yet harvested. I am four-score and more years old, yet shall I live long after his return, and he and his shall be the joy of my closing days. Youth is impatient, but it is powerless to check God's plans. Do you believe what I have told you,

"I do." answered Jessie Carden, and her voice and the confident look in her eyes added emphasis to her declaration. Peter Burt abruptly changed the subject, nor did he return to it. For nearly three hours they talked on various topics, and never once did Peter Burt lead the conversation in a direction not entertaining to his fair young visitor. Not until the great rock to the west of the house threw its ing shadow over them did Jessie look at her watch. With an exclamation of surprise she arose to go. "You have made this afternoon a very happy one for me, my child," he said, as he lifted her to the saddle. He bowed his gray head and raised his powerful arms.

"May God bless and keep you, my daughter." Jessie rode home in the fading sun light, a great joy in her heart. "He is alive and well!" she repeated, time and time again. A week later Jessie sailed for France. It was nearly two years before she completed her studies, and again entered Boston harbor.

ty lips. The crimson left her cheek and she looked trankly into her modesty of virtue. General Carden was disarmed. ever "Nothing has been heard from Mr. Burt so far as I can learn, Jessie," he said. "Possibly his grandfather may have news. I am reasonably sure Mr. Morris has none. Let us talk of something else, Jessie.

M

The door opened and Mrs. Bishop entered "Here is your evening mail, Marshall," she said, handing her brother a number of letters. "And here is a

CHAPTER XX.

General Carden Is Puzzied.

found your glasses on the writing desk. You are careless as ever, papa

dear. Isn't it nice to have some one who knows just what you wish and

"It is, Jessie, my pet!" And Gen

"I shall not let you read all the evening, papa, because I have so many things to tell you," said Jessie.

smoothing back the scant gray locks.

room of Mr. Bishop's New York rest-

They were in the cozy drawing

"It is remarkable how easily a new

concern can establish itself in Wall

Street," said General Carden, laying aside his paper and slowly wiping his glasses. Jessie raised her eyes with dutiful interest. "It was not so in the old conservative days. It then took years to establish standing and credit.

Now an unknown man can come out

from the West and have the Street

by the ears in thirty days. For exampie, take this man Blake, who has established the firm of Blake & Company. He suddenly appeared here from San Francisco and conducted a campaign which swept two old established houses off their feet. His profits were estimated at millions.

Since then we have heard of nothing but the doings of James Blake. Here is an article," continued General Carden, picking up a paper, "which gives an account of a conference between this upstart and the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. They say Blake is only twenty-seven years old. Jessie, my dear, it is a great thing to be born fortunate. You were not wise, darling, in your selection of a father." General Carden smiled

"I've the best and dearest father in the world!" exclaimed Jessie, placing her hand in his. "But I'm not going to let him read the papers any more this evening. Let's forget all about the old stocks and the wonderful Mr.

Blake, and talk of those we know.

Papa, dear, I wish to ask you a ques-

children must not ask questions."

"What is it, my pet? They say that

Burt? I-I thought perhaps Mr. Morris would know as soon as any one.'

General Carden's lips tightened.

He pulled nervously at his beard, and the military moustache bristled ag-

"Answer me, papa! I have a right

There was a flash in the tender eyes and a warning curve in the pretfather's face. There is in innocence

the bravery of truth and the calm

eral Carden placed his arm around his daughter's waist, drew her fair face down to his and kissed her fondly.

where to find it?"

dence.

sadly.

tion.

gressively.

to know this."

"Here are the papers, papa dear. And here are cigars and matches. I letter for you, Jessie.' Jessie opened and read a note from Arthur Morris. It congratulated her on a safe return from abroad, and closed by asking permission to call on the first evening which would suit her convenience. The letter lay idly in her hand, and her thoughts were far away when the general uttered an exclamation. "A most astounding coincidence! Really, this is quite remarkable!"

"What has happened, papa?" (To be continued.)

Transformation of a Shabby Man. A certain New York man whose bank account is so fat that it takes six figures to measure it, used to go around looking reprehensibly shabby. Recently there has been a change in his appearance. Nowadays his attire is really natty and he shaves at least three times a week. One day the shabby looking man went into J. Pierpont Morgan's office on business connected with a charity. He asked to see Mr. Clarke, who looks after some of the charity affairs in which Mr. Margan is interested.

"Mr. Clarke is not in now," said one of the clerks. "If you will come tomorrow you may be able to catch him and possibly he will help you a liftle.'

The shabby-looking man thought that closing sentence sounded rather queer. "Thank you," he said, sarcastically.

You are very kind."

"That's all right," replied the clerk, T've been broke myself." The shabby-looking man saw light. "Oh," he said. Since then the shabby-looking man has ceased to be shabby. Raw Eggs a Tonic.

A raw egg is an excellent tonic and is very strengthening. If prepared in the following way it is really a delicious drink. Put the yolk of an egg into a dish with a teaspoonful of white sugar and a teaspoonful of orange or lemon juice, and beat lightly together with a fork. Put the writes on a plate and add a pinch of salt; then, with a broad-bladed knife, heat it to a stiff froth. Now, as lighty as possible, mix all together in the dish, then as lightly transfer it to a clean tumbler, which it will nearly fill if properly made. It must not stand in a warm place, as it soon becomes liquid and loses its snowy look. Any fruit juice may be used in place of orange or lemon.

illustrated. The pattern 4753 is cut in sizes for a 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40 inch bust measure.

is tender.

served for a long time. If unable to secure the indented and color hay water is good. You make it embroidery and forming rosettes.

Let them rest again for about a