President Welcomes Norwegian Singers.

Otto Skjelver sends us the following editorial clipping from the Minneapolis Times, with a request to publish it—a request which we are pleased to comply with owing to the fact there is quite a colony of Norwegians in this county:

President Roosevelt gave the Norwegian singers a cordial welcome at the White House yesterday and listened to their singing, in their mother tongue and in English. He also told them of his interest in the lore of their nation and induced laughter when he explained that he was but a poor performer on the skis.

But the national executive voiced another sentiment when he hoped "more Norwegians would come to this country and become citizens." We of Minnesota know that those who come to our state from the north land are among our best citizens; that they are peaceful, law abiding, home-loving industrious men and women. That they are ever proud to become citizens of this great republic, and that, while retaining a kindly spot for the fatherland, they are loyal to their adopted country. Minnesota wants more of them also. They have made the waste places on our fertile acres produce homes and a generous living, they believe in good government and have a wholesome regard for the law of the land.

Because we value highly our friends from the great north peninsula, we hope all the more that the action of Norway in declaring her independence will not result in any warlike disturbances that will involve these good people.

The Norwegians and Swedes in Minnesota are numerous. The Times wishes for the sake of peace that between these two nations, so closely allied, there will never be a serious misunderstanding.
